Barrows Announces College Building Project START IN SPRING

6 Fraternity Houses Will Be Erected Across From Sage Hall

President Thomas N. Barrows of Lawrence college, announced today that the college will construct a new $275,000 quadrangle across from Russell Sage hall to provide new quarters for the six fraternities on the campus.

Each of the six units, built of Wisconsin stone, will house 22 men. The Georgian style buildings have been designed by Richard Phillips, Milwaukee architect. Excavation for the project will start in the spring, President Barrows announced.

Financial arrangements for this project have been made possible through gifts from trustees, the contribution of property and equities from the fraternities, and a loan for the balance. The fraternity contributions will be paid back in the form of scholarships to members.

The quadrangle will be U-shaped, bounded by Lawe street on the west, Alton street on the north, and John street on the south. The houses will face a center park, which will be landscaped with bushes, walks and which will have a fountain in the center.

The quadrangle will circle the court, with entrances onto Alton and John streets. While the houses will be facing the park, the sides which face the streets will be extremely attractive and will have double entrances.

The first floor of each unit will contain a large living room, library, alcove, card room, music room, cloak room, telephone booth, a single and two double bedrooms and studies. One side will house a suite for a house mother, and a powder room for women visitors.

The basement of each house will feature a large dining room, game room and chapter room, all divided by folding doors which may be opened to form one large "T" shaped room suitable for formal dinners and dances. The dimensions of this enlarged room will be 53 by 31 feet. Kitchen facilities, cook's quarters, a trunk room, a wash room and pressing room also will be included in the basement facilities. This portion of the house, it was pointed out, cannot truly be classed as a basement since the floor will be only four feet below ground level.

Two large stairways will ascend to the second floor where eight double study and dressing rooms, each containing two closets, will be situated. One single bedroom and study will be included here. Sleeping porches will be built at each end of the house, affording three exposures and each accommodating eight men. A linen closet, a telephone booth and enlarged bathroom facilities will also be included.

The total cost to men living in these new buildings, including room and board, fraternity activities, and

State Labor Act Is Constitutional, Court Ruling Says

Judge Confirms Order Directing Union to End Mass Picketing

Milwaukee — (P) — Circuit Judge Otto H. Breidenbach upheld the constitutionality of the Wisconsin "employment peace act" today in confirming the order of the state employment relations board directing a union of the Allen-Bradley company to cease mass picketing near the plant and threatening non-strikers.

The strike of the United Electrical, Radio and Machine Workers Local 1,111 (CIO) ended Aug. 3, several days before a hearing on the state board's petition for a court order to enforce its own decree.

Judge Breidenbach overruled a contention of the union's counsel that the Wisconsin act was void because it attempted to regulate the same employer-employee relations covered by the federal act.

Cites High Court Ruling

The judge cited a Wisconsin Supreme Court ruling that "the national act does not purport to exclude states from the regulation of the field of labor relations."

The court also rejected the union's argument that the state law tended to interfere with entrance or egress of employees from their place of work, violated the constitutional rights of free speech and peaceful assembly.

Judge Breidenbach said this provision of the act "is not intended to declare all mass picketing to be unlawful, but it is expressly limited in its application to cases tending to hinder or prevent the pursuit of any lawful work or employment."

2 DEAD IN "WILLIAM TELL" SHOOTING

Detectives (upper) are seen examining a rifle and apple found hanging to a light fixture at Elizabeth, Pa., two clues in the deaths of Norval Harrison (lower left), 15-year-old Boy Scout, and Daniel Hackett (right), southmaster. Police theorized Hackett shot the youth accidentally in a William Tell-apple-on-the-head stunt and then killed himself in remorse.

Prober and Attorney for House Committee Clash at Labor Board Investigation

Washington — (P) — A bristling verbal exchange between a member and the chief attorney of the house committee investigating the national labor relations board broke out today when the latter outlined proposals for future committee action.

Representative Murdock (D-Utah) disagreed with Edmund M. Toland, committee counsel, over Toland's statement that what he considered some decisions the committee must make.

Reviewing certain testimony about NLRB decisions on employee representation, together with congressional debate on the subject, Toland said the committee must decide whether employers have the right to "contract away" the rights of employees.

Murdock promptly expressed the hope that Toland would make plain that his statement did not represent anything the committee had agreed upon, or even that Murdock had known the statement was to be made.

Looking over his glasses at Murdock, Toland replied that everything he did was with "the knowledge of the committee and the consent of the committee."

"I want to say straight 'Mr. Congressman,' the tall, baldish lawyer added, "that what I do is not based on any opinion or conclusion that I may have."

Among the points that Toland said the committee must decide was

Fund Diversion Is Under Attack

Road Builders Told $8,000,000 Would Be Used By July 1, 1941

Madison — (P) — The Wisconsin Road Builders association had before it today a prediction that if present policies of the Heil administration were continued, the state would have to divert $8,000,000 of highway funds and would still be without a cash balance when the fiscal biennium ends July 1, 1941.

The prediction was made by A. J. Thelen, Madison, executive secretary of the Wisconsin County Boards association.

He said counties would be asked by Governor Heil to take their road aids in instalments when they fall due next July. The governor and representatives of the League of Wisconsin Municipalities have agreed on a plan of paying in four instalments, $3,707,000 of aids to cities due tomorrow.

Thelen said the state diverted an average of $3,900,000 of highway funds during each of the late five years.

"There is no mystery about running the state on highway money," he asserted. "The state started the present biennium with $9,000,000 on hand, which is much less than the average of $14,000,000 usually on hand at the beginning of a biennium. The legislature left taxes $17,000,000 short of balancing the budget."

"There is only one place the state can get the $8,000,000 difference and that is from the highway fund. This means that $8,000,000 will have to be diverted except for whatever small economies that can be effected and they are small."

Shawano High School Wins Drama Contest

Madison — (P) — Shawano High school won first place last night in the finals of the state drama contest conducted by the University of Wisconsin and the Wisconsin High School Forensic association.

The Shawano cast produced "The Happy Journey" by Thornton Wilder.

Eau Claire High school's performance of "The Undercurrent" by Fay Ehlert, won second place award and third place went to Horton High school for its production of "The Trysting Place" by Booth Tarkington.

Fire May Bring End to Colony

Heads of Experimental Group in Indiana Uncertain About Future

Merom, Ind. — (P) — A $50,000 fire which destroyed the main building of an experimental cooperative colony maintained here by the Congregational-Christian church cast doubt over the colony's future today.

A three-story, 40-room brick dormitory housing 35 members of the seven families in the colony burned yesterday with nearly all the residents' possessions.

The 74-year-old structure was the main dormitory of Union Christian college, abandoned several years ago. Firemen from Sullivan and Fairbanks kept the fire from spreading to another large building.

The blaze was believed started from an overheated furnace.

The Rev. Shirley Green of Chicago organized unemployed families into the cooperative 18 months ago. They operated various cooperative enterprises to earn a living for their group. One enterprise was a community laundry room where Merom women went to wash clothes.

Social science classes from many colleges had visited the colony.

Germany and Russia Sign Friendship and Boundary Agreement

Berlin — (P) — The German-Russian friendship and boundary treaty initiated Sept. 28 was ratified today at the foreign office by Foreign Minister Joachim von Ribbentrop and Alexander Shkharbatzky, Russian ambassador to Berlin.

The accord as announced Sept. 20 contained agreement on a mutual German-Russian border in conquered Poland, wiping that nation off the map of Europe, and rejected any interference by third powers in the settlement.

It was called "a secure foundation for a progressive development of friendly relations" and provision was made for ratification "as soon as possible" in Berlin.

The treaty was part of a three-sided agreement between the two countries. Under the other parts, Germany and Russia were put side by side in urging France and Great Britain to end their war against Germany and, should they refuse, in cooperating to restore peace, and also to develop their economic relations.

Bodies of 350 Victims Of Wreck Drift Ashore

Wakkanai, Hokkaido, Japan. — (P) — Bodies of about 350 persons, half those believed lost in the blizzard-tossed wreck of the Soviet Russian steamer Indigirka, drifted ashore today.

Four hundred twenty survivors were taken by the Japanese ship Karafuto Maru to Otaru, Hokkaido, where local officials arranged for their relief.

The Russian ship, driven ashore during a storm, had about 1,100 persons aboard, mostly Russian fishermen and their families.

The 19-year-old, 2,690-ton ship originally was the American Commercial Quaker. It was sold to Russia in 1938 and placed in the fishing service.

Nazi Pocket Battleship Trapped in Uruguayan Port After Sea Battle

Chamberlain Thinks Raider's Career Brought to End

AID TO FINLAND Says Britain Must Help Finns but Concentrate On Own War

London — (P) — Prime Minister Chamberlain declared today that "the gallant action" of "three comparatively small British ships against a much more heavily armed adversary" probably would free the south Atlantic from depredations of the German raider Admiral Graf Spee.

Lauding the League of Nations' action in condemning Russia for the invasion of Finland, Chamberlain told the house of commons that "Germany alone among the nations even now is abetting by word and deed the Russian aggression."

"We must give what help and support we can to the latest victim of this destructive forces," the prime minister said, "but meanwhile it is only by concentrating on our task of resistance to German aggression and thus attacking the evil at its root that we can hope to save the nations of Europe from the fate which otherwise must overtake them."

Denies Gas Used

In confident tones Chamberlain's review touched on the visit of King George to British troops in France, flight of British planes over German naval bases, the sinking of another German submarine and the south Atlantic naval engagement.

He indignantly denied German charges that the British used mustard gas shells in the battle of Uruguay.

Turning to Finland, Chamberlain said that "while strongly condemning Soviet aggression," the British government believes "every effort should be made to utilize league machinery for peaceful settlement of the dispute and, if that should prove impossible, for affording practical assistance to the victim of aggression."

Enlarging on the Finnish-Russian conflict, the prime minister added: "It is too soon to attempt any forecast of the outcome of this unequal struggle but its political consequences already have been far-reaching."

He asserted Russian aggression "had outraged the conscience of the whole world."

"Nevertheless," Chamberlain continued, "the German government have publicly ranged themselves on the side of an aggressor whom they have even attempted to assist by a scurrilous and violent campaign against other Scandinavian countries for their moral support of the Finnish cause."

The house cheered Chamberlain's statement that "in addition to air supplies to Finland the government intend similarly to release other materials that will be of assistance to the Finnish government."

He added that generous help had been forthcoming from other countries, including the United States.

He said Germany seized on the Finnish conflict to deflect attention from the primary object of the allied war effort—the defeat of Nazi Germany.

League of Nations Council Ousts Soviet Union Because Of Her Invasion of Finland

Geneva — (P) — The League of Nations, by unanimous vote of its council, today expelled Soviet Russia because of her invasion of Finland.

Four members of the council, including Finland, abstained from voting on the expulsion motion. The others were China, Yugoslavia and Greece.

The vote was on a resolution which declared that as a result of Russia's actions toward Finland "the U. S. R. no longer is a member of the league."

Unanimous vote of the council is necessary to expel a member. Abstentions do not affect unanimity.

This was the first time in league history that a nation had been expelled.

The council acted after the assembly had condemned Russia as an aggressor, called on its members to aid Finland and approved an invitation to non-league nations, such as the United States, also to help the little republic.

The council and assembly both adjourned after taking action on the Russian-Finnish issue.

Cites Past Aggressions

Joseph Paul-Boncour, the French delegate, just before the council vote declared that although France would give Finland all possible help and would vote for Russian expulsion, she could not do so without recalling past aggressions.

Paul-Boncour told the council that aggressions "which preceded this one made it possible."

He declared that the league "perhaps is waking a little late" and referred to former Russian Foreign Minister Maxim Litvinoff's frequent condemnations of aggression before the council. He broke away from his prepared text to say that "Russia's violation is connected with all past aggression."

Paul-Boncour was followed by British Foreign Undersecretary A. Butler, who also made slight changes in his prepared speech to meet his ally's stand. He emphasized that nothing was as important

Graf Spee, Damaged In Running Fight, May Be Interned

14-HOUR FIGHT One of Three British Cruisers Forced to Withdraw; 36 Nazis Dead

London — (P) — The admiralty announced tonight naval forces watching for the German pocket battleship Admiral Graf Spee "have been strongly reinforced."

No details were given, however, of the additions to the cruisers Ajax and Achilles which mounted guard outside Montevideo in an effort to prevent escape of the Nazi warship from the neutral port.

New York — (P) — The National Broadcasting company broadcast from Uruguay today that the German pocket battleship Admiral Graf Spee, crippled in a running fight with British warcraft yesterday, apparently was being prepared to sail almost immediately from its refuge at Montevideo.

The announcer said the German battleship apparently planned to give battle to a reinforced squadron of British cruisers lying in wait at the mouth of the river where the Graf Spee had sought safety.

The announcer said that repairs were being rushed on the Admiral Graf Spee, anchored in the middle of Montevideo harbor, and that of the British warcraft the Town classed with 600,000 gallons of fuel oil, steamed out of the harbor early this morning—presumably to await the Graf Spee at sea and refuel her.

Montevideo, Uruguay — (P) — The German pocket battleship Admiral Graf Spee clung to her refuge today in this neutral port, "trapped" by British cruisers after a 14-hour running battle.

Interment for the duration of the European war seemed the only prospect for the "doughty fighter" which Germany built to outrun or outgun any other warship afloat. Her other chance would be a desperate gamble at escape after repairs of heavy damage.

Thirty-six of her crew—normally 926—were dead and 60 were injured.

Far into the night she lay at anchor, potential target of the guns of the cruisers Ajax and Achilles which were scarcely cool from yesterday's battle.

With dawn, however, the British ships had clung to her refuge today in video roads and were not visible within two and a half hours sailing.

It was presumed the British warships merely had withdrawn to points outside territorial waters of the broad mouth of Rio de la Plata.

Badly Damaged

Daylight permitted closer inspection of the Admiral Graf Spee's wounds—two large holes in the bridge area, another astern and a fourth at the bow, as well as slight damage from shellfire along her starboard above the waterline, particularly in the engine room area.

The wounded crewmen remained aboard, except for two gravely injured seamen who were taken to a military hospital.

The decision on disposition of the dead was yet to be announced.

A silent, arched through jammed police lines through the night, craning for a glimpse of the battered ship.

Montevideo officials said early this morning no steps had been taken toward internment of the Admiral Graf Spee.

The extent of the British casualties remained unknown. There had been no British attempt to land dead or wounded on the Uruguayan coast.

Exeter Out of Fight

Reports that many had been killed and wounded among the cruiser Exeter's crew—normally about 600 men—were without verification.

The Exeter was knocked out of the battle after four hours of cannonading, leaving it to the Achilles and Ajax to put the German warship to flight.

On the basis of normal complements of the pocket battleship and her adversaries of yesterday, more

Reich Liner Tries To Run Blockade

Freighter Also at Sea After Leaving Veracruz Harbor

Veracruz, Mexico — (P) — The 32,581-ton German liner Columbus shipped out of Veracruz in the darkness early today on what was an apparent attempt to run the Atlantic and reach a German port through the allied naval blockade.

Also at sea was the German freighter Arauca, which cleared Veracruz harbor with a mixed cargo of fiber, nitrates and other consignments for New Orleans, La.

The Columbus, a rich war prize if it falls into the hands of allied warships, obtained papers for a trans-Atlantic crossing.

The secrecy of her departure was because of the presence of British warships patrolling gulf and Caribbean waters.

Representatives of the Columbus had given Oslo, Norway, as her destination in obtaining clearance papers and since yesterday afternoon the vessel had been at liberty to sail without further notice to Allied authorities.

Crew members had been recalled from shore leave and the Columbus was heavily provisioned and fueled. In the last week she had taken aboard more than 20,000 barrels of oil.

Ship's agents also obtained papers yesterday for the Arauca.

Both the Columbus and the Arauca have been in this port since early in the European war.

Operations Resumed At Waukesha Motors

Waukesha — (P) — Five hundred shop workers and 200 office employees were back at work today at the Waukesha Motor company following settlement of a strike called Nov. 10.

Approximately 400 other workers will return as operations increase.

A joint statement by company officials and the (AFL) Machinists' union issued late yesterday following report of the settlement, said the agreement provided recognition of the union as exclusive bargaining agent for all shop employees and some increases in wages after a survey of rates which will be completed about Jan. 15.

British Admiralty Reports About 120 Lives Lost in Collision of 2 Warships

London — (P) — The admiralty reported today the British destroyer Duchess had collided with another warship and sunk with an indicated loss of 120 lives.

Only three blows—all dealt by Germany—have been more disastrous to the British navy since the outbreak of the war.

They were the sinking of the aircraft carrier Courageous with a loss of 578 men, the battleship Royal Oak with 788 men and the armed merchantman Rawalpindi with 263 men.

Details of where or how the collision occurred were not given but it was disclosed that it happened yesterday.

The admiralty said the other ship, which was not immediately identified, was undamaged.

Only one officer and 22 men were saved, it said. The Duchess was commanded by Lieutenant Commander R. C. H. White.

The Duchess was a warship of 1,375 tons in the Defender class and was completed Jan. 24, 1933. She carried a normal complement of 145 men.

Last July 6 she assisted in removing foreigners, including Americans, from besieged Foochow. Last May 24 she forced a Japanese cruiser to allow the British liner Rampona to proceed near Hongkong.

The 202-ton mine-sweeping trawler William Hallett sank today with the loss of eight lives after striking a mine. Only one of her crew of nine was saved. The vessel was the sixth British minesweeper lost during the war with total casualties of 67.

Two Doomed to Die For Part in Explosion

London — (P) — Two men convicted of complicity in an explosion at Coventry last Aug. 25 in which five persons were killed and for which the outlawed Irish republican army was blamed were sentenced to death today.

One of the convicted men, James Richards, 29, cried "God bless Ireland and God bless the men who fought and died for her" as sentence was passed.

The other, Peter Barnes, 32, declared he was innocent before the court decreed the death penalty.

A jury found that three other persons Joseph Hewitt, his wife Mrs. Mary Hewitt, and Bridget O'Hara, were innocent of murder charges.

Bank Fights Order to Yield 'Dead Accounts'

Madison — (P) — The Marshall and Isley bank of Milwaukee, appealed to the supreme court today from an order requiring it to turn over to the state $10,476 of deposits in "dead accounts."

Dane County Circuit Judge Alvin C. Reis issued the lower court ruling.

Manrice B. Pasch, special counsel for the attorney general's office, said the total sum included certified checks and certificates of deposit along with savings and checking accounts for more than 20 years.

He said that while the bank appealed from the whole of Judge Reis' decision, the principal issue was whether the state could claim certified deposits. The amount of such deposits in the total claim was not estimated.

Republicans are Split on Question Of Foreign Policy

Some Opposed to Its Injection in Presidential Campaign

Washington—(AP)—A sharp division in Republican ranks over whether American foreign policy should be made an issue in the 1940 campaign arose today as an aftermath of "Draft Roosevelt" pronouncements by two new deal diplomats.

Rep. Dittler of Pennsylvania, chairman of the Republican congressional campaign committee, said in regard to statements by Ambassadors Joseph P. Kennedy and Joseph E. Davies advocating a third term:

"All citizens are agreed there should be no partisanship whatever in regard to foreign affairs. Yet here are two United States ambassadors who apparently are so pre-occupied with partisan politics that the first words they utter after setting foot on American soil constitute ballyhoo for a third term."

Dittler's statement, issued through the Republican national committee, appeared simultaneously with a prediction by Senator Borah (R-Idaho) that "our foreign policy and foreign questions will be the most thoroughly discussed and debated questions in this campaign."

Borah, who opposed repeal of the arms embargo, indicated he would carry the foreign policy issue to the country himself if Republican candidates now on the stump attempted to dodge or soft-pedal it.

Remark Made Last Week

Dittler's statement referred to a remark by Ambassador Kennedy on his return from London last week that "no man, however brilliant or earnest, could take over the presidency at this critical hour because he would need two years of training to handle the foreign situation as ably as the incumbent. It also mentioned Davies' comments at the White House yesterday virtually echoing Kennedy's views."

(It was learned last night that Mr. Roosevelt may keep Davies here for consultation about the European situation instead of returning him to his post in Belgium.)

Dittler said: "Not a word of rebuke of these two gentlemen (Kennedy and Davies) has come from the White House, despite the fact that Kennedy, of Arizona, and Wallace, several weeks ago was slapped down hard by a presidential secretary for asserting substantially what Ambassadors Kennedy and Davies said. Indeed, Mr. Kennedy used the White House itself as a sounding board for his contention that would affirm the reelection of the president is necessary."

"When Mr. Wallace said that, Presidential Secretary Early asserted that 'it would have been kind and polite for the speaker to have consulted the victim before he spoke.'"

"Is it possible that Ambassadors Kennedy and Davies first 'consulted' the victim and that the words they uttered are now coming to his ears? Is it possible that with the flap of the photogenic Paul V. McNutt, Mr. Roosevelt has decided he will undertake to smash the greatest of all American traditions and seek a third term?"

BRITISH CRUISERS DRIVE GERMAN POCKET BATTLESHIP INTO NEUTRAL PORT AFTER RUNNING FIGHT

A 14-hour running sea fight between three British cruisers and the German pocket battleship Admiral Graf Spee ended in the badly-damaged warship taking refuge in the neutral Montevideo harbor with 36 of her crew killed and 60 injured. The above map indicates the approximate location of the battle.

The British cruiser Exeter, upper left, was reported damaged in the fight off the coast of Uruguay. The British cruiser Achilles, lower left, along with the Ajax ran down the Graf Spee after the Exeter was put out of action.

Council Will Seek WPA Money to Build Grandstand at Field

Alfred Wickesberg, city engineer, has completed the plans for the grandstand for Spencer field and now is working out the WPA setup with representatives of WPA in Outagamie county.

The project, which will involve about $12,000 of Appleton tax money, will be ready within a few days, Wickesberg said. The project then will be submitted to the city council for approval before an application for a federal grant is made.

Work on the grandstand is expected to start shortly after Jan. 1. The area on which the stand will be built has been covered with marsh hay to keep out the frost and make excavating easier.

Canned Goods to Be Movie Tickets

Salvation Army Chapter Sponsoring Show Saturday Morning

The Appleton chapter of the Salvation Army will sponsor the showing of a western picture and three cartoon comedies at 9 o'clock Saturday morning at the Appleton theater, the admission being an article of food, preferably canned goods.

Captain T. A. Raber said this morning the chapter expects about 1,400 children to jam the theater Saturday. The canned goods and other articles of food received will be used to place in the Christmas baskets the chapter will distribute among Appleton's needy families.

Captain Raber has announced the chapter is hoping to fill 100 baskets this year, an increase of 15 over last year's goal.

He reported that the response to the appeal made through the two Christmas kettles on College avenue has been "fair" and the chapter expected contributions to increase during the last week or so preceding Christmas. Proceeds from the kettles are used for the baskets.

Famous Etcher to Spend Semester at Lawrence College

Emil Ganso, Artist-in-Residence, Will Have Campus Studio

Emil Ganso, widely known American etcher, will be artist-in-residence at Lawrence college during the second semester. It was announced today by President Thomas N. Harrows.

Some years ago the Carnegie corporation undertook to assist colleges in a program of this kind. In most instances the artist has been a muralist and has done murals in college buildings, giving students the opportunity to watch him at work, consult with him, and participate in the projects.

Ganso will teach no regular classes, but will have considerable contact with students. He will make six or eight etchings of college buildings and scenes, to be used as illustrations in the college catalog.

Original etching prints will be taken from these prints and will be sold to students, alumni, and friends of the college at a moderate price, giving them an opportunity to start or augment collections.

Ganso, recognized as one of the outstanding American artists, will do his work in a special studio on the campus. Interested students will have an opportunity to discuss with him the views to be used and will watch him etch the plates and make the prints.

Succeed in Freeing Freighter From Bar

Grand Haven, Mich.—(AP)—Three tugboats succeeded at 4:30 a. m. today in refloating the freighter Sensibar from the sandbar on which she grounded a week ago during a storm.

The Sensibar was refloated during a calm spell by the combined efforts of the tugs Favorite of Sault Ste. Marie, and the Montana and Wisconsin, of South Chicago. The latter two tugs were towing the Sensibar here from South Chicago last Thursday when the hawvers parted and the freighter was driven ashore two miles south of the harbor.

It was not immediately determined how much damage the Sensibar had suffered during her week on the sand bar.

The vessel is to be converted into a gravel carrier.

Police Chief Warns Motorists to Drive Carefully This Month

Cooperating with the state motor vehicle department, Police Chief George T. Prim today warned motorists and pedestrians to be especially careful on streets and highways during December.

More persons were killed in traffic accidents in Wisconsin during December last year than in any other single month of 1938, figures kept by the safety division of the motor vehicle department reveal.

December, the most joyous month of the year in most homes, was a month filled with grief and suffering last year in the homes from which 84 persons came who lost their lives in automobile mishaps.

December also was the only month in 1938 which failed to show a reduction of fatalities from the corresponding month of the preceding year.

Few Tickets Left for High School Concert

Jay I. Williams, who will direct the Appleton High school orchestra at the concert Sunday afternoon in the high school auditorium, reported today that most of the 2,200 tickets for the program have been distributed.

He said there were "a few" tickets left at the Meyer-Seeger Music company store. The orchestra and the chorus, directed by A. A. Glockzin, will appear in the concert, which starts at 2 o'clock Sunday afternoon.

Railroads Ordered To Broaden Service

Lansing, Mich.—(AP)—The Public Service Commission has ordered the Duluth, South Shore and Atlantic railroad and the Minneapolis, St. Paul and Sault Ste. Marie railroad to broaden their train service in the upper peninsula.

The order, to become effective 10 days after it has been signed, upholds the contention of upper peninsula citizens that the D.S.S. and A. was unwarranted in its cancellation of daily passenger runs between Gladstone and Sault Ste. Marie by its trains No. 1 and 2.

The commission similarly overruled the M. St. P. and S. road in its cancellation of daily passenger runs between Gladstone and Sault Ste. Marie by its trains No. 86 and 87.

Commissioner Gilbert T. Shilson said yesterday the order would be signed within the next two days.

Two Autos Involved In Minor Collision

Cars driven by Dick Steffes, 809 N. Morrison street, and Mrs. G. F. Robertson, 1809 W. Franklin street, were involved in a minor collision about 5 o'clock yesterday afternoon on College avenue. Russian Troops Reported Near Norway Frontier

Finns Apparently Preparing to Withdraw Further South

Kirkenes, Norway (At the Finnish Frontier)—(AP)—Russian troops, advancing rapidly through the Petsamo district, are approaching Salmijarvi near the Norwegian frontier and the Finns seem to be preparing to withdraw from that town to defense lines further south.

Salmijarvi and four other towns in the region—Kolsjoki, Tullevi, Koivolahti and Koveranta all were ablaze today.

The entire district from Boris-Giev to Salmijarvi was covered with black smoke.

The Petsamo district is a narrow corridor of Finnish territory on the Arctic ocean.

Though Finland at this point is scarcely 30 miles wide, it could not be clearly discerned how far the Russian troops have advanced.

Finns escaping from Salmijarvi to the Norwegian town of Svanvik, just across the border, said Salmijarvi no longer could be held.

It was uncertain whether the burning towns had been fired by retreating Finns or by Russian bombers.

Three Russian bombing planes circled over Salmijarvi this morning and were greeted by heavy anti-aircraft and machine-gun fire which continued into the afternoon.

Helsinki—(AP)—Military observers reported the Finns were in position today to organize counterattacks after stopping the Soviet Russian invasion on the Karelian isthmus.

A Finnish army communiqué reported last night the red army had been brought to a standstill, and that fighting on the isthmus was localized.

On the eastern or middle front, the Finns said the Russians continued fierce attacks but that counterattacks cost the Russians "great losses."

(A Russian communiqué from headquarters of the Leningrad military area said an advance of between 65 and 66 miles into Finland had been made on the eastern front.

(On the northern shore of Lake Ladoga, the Russian communiqué reported an advance of about seven miles.)

Red Planes Active

The Finnish communiqué said Russian planes flying above the clouds had dropped bombs in the vicinity of Hanko, southwestern tip of Finland, and 20 miles farther inland.

The Finnish air force, it said, made successful bombing and machine-gun raids on Russian mechanized forces and infantry "in different sectors of the war area."

Coast artillery bombarded the Russians on the Karelian isthmus and annihilated forces operating on coastal roads on Lake Ladoga, the Finns said.

(Fighting on the Arctic front was not reported, but the Norwegian radio said the bodies of six Russians had been found five miles from the Norwegian frontier near Kirkenes and that they probably were part of a patrol which was repelled after almost traversing Finnish soil in that section.)

(Another sidelight on the Arctic warfare came from the correspondent of red Karelia, Russian paper published near the Finnish frontier. He complained that the Finns, frequently in stocking feet, camouflaged themselves in white robes and darted out on skis "to shoot at our advancing units."

(He described such attacks as "bandit tactics.")

Committee Named For Citizenship Project in County

Executive Group Meeting Will Be Held Soon To Map Plans

Henry J. VanStraten, Outagamie county superintendent of schools, today announced the executive committee for the Outagamie County Citizenship project to be carried out during the winter and spring months. The committee will hold its first meeting soon to map the program.

The county board at its November meeting appropriated $50 for the program which is headed by Ben J. Rohan, Appleton superintendent of schools. VanStraten is secretary of the program.

Members of the executive committee are Rohan; VanStraten; Curcuit Judge Edgar V. Werner; County Clerk John E. Hantschel; J. F. Cavanaugh, Kaukauna superintendent of schools; H. H. Helble, principal of Appleton High school; County Agent J. E. Magnus; Mike Mack, chairman of the county board; Homer Gebhardt, secretary of the Y. M. C. A.; Mrs. H. F. Scherzinger, representing the Appleton League of Women Voters; Walter P. Hagman, principal of the Outagamie county high school.

Long Distance Mail Should Be Sent Off Soon, Balliet Advises

With Christmas only a short 10 days off, Stephen Balliet, Appleton postmaster, advised that long distance letters and parcels, intended to reach recipients before Christmas should be mailed soon.

The Christmas rush is beginning to be felt in the post office and the handling of mail and parcels will take longer than usual. The same situation will be faced by post office workers all over the nation.

Balliet also advised that stamps be purchased early to avoid standing in line at the post office as Christmas nears. He said those who mail letters and parcels should be sure the letter or parcel carries a return address, clearly written.

He said addresses should be clearly and completely written, or the Christmas cards and gifts might wind up in the dead letter office.

Members of the executive committee are Rohan; VanStraten; Curcuit Judge Edgar V. Werner; County Clerk John E. Hantschel; J. F. Cavanaugh, Kaukauna superintendent of schools; H. H. Helble, principal of Appleton High school; County Agent J. E. Magnus; Mike Mack, chairman of the county board; Homer Gebhardt, secretary of the Y. M. C. A.; Mrs. H. F. Constantinople Is Again Focal Point On Map of Europe

Germany, Russia Would Like to Control Turkey, Trevor Says

European nations are once more turning covetous eyes on Constantinople, a city that has been the object of conflict and the center of diplomatic manipulations for centuries because of its strategic location, Dr. A. A. Trevor, professor of ancient and European history at Lawrence college, said in a talk before the Appleton Kiwanis club yesterday afternoon in the Conway hotel.

Germany and Russia, though withholding any outward show of great interest, are both intensely conscious of Turkey's important geographic location, Dr. Trevor said. "Neither the Nazis nor the Russians would want the other to get control of Turkey," Dr. Trevor said.

Tracing the history of Constantinople and indicating its strategic position by use of a map, the Lawrence professor said that efforts to control the city and the Turkish nation was one of the chief causes of friction between England and Germany and of the World war.

Increased Strength
The Turks, he said, greatly strengthened their country after the World War, due to the weakness of Greece and the leadership of Mustafa Kemal in the nationalistic movement.

Constantinople, the professor said, is surrounded by water on three sides, which makes it easy to defend, and guards the entrance into the Black sea. He told the club that the importance of the Black sea as a shipping lane is frequently minimized or overlooked, pointing out that it is the waterway to and from the great wheat fields in southern Russia. The sea is five times the size of Lake Superior, he said.

Constantine, the Roman emperor, established the city and called it "New Rome," Dr. Trevor said. The emperor said the city because he wanted to get away from the Roman senate and felt that in this new location he would have a better chance to establish Christianity.

The Turks took the city in 1453 and were able to preserve it from their own destruction, he said. Constantinople has the title of the "City of Constantine."

London Families to Spend Christmas Apart
London (P)—Prime Minister Chamberlain today urged London parents not to bring their children home from the country for Christmas, and said that the same longing for peaceful family unity will be denied to many homes in all belligerent countries.

"The responsibility of those who, for their own ambition, have imposed such tragedy on the world is terrible indeed," Chamberlain said.

"Yet for us in this country, the message of Christmas is not in truth a tragic one, but a reminder that we are fighting to defend the principles and ideals which for 2,000 years have inspired the minds of men and lifted up their hearts."

Hoover Denies Reports of Friction Between Finnish Relief Agencies in America

He relief activities in the United States because he wished to participate in the 1940 presidential campaign and did not desire to become identified with the New Deal.

"There is not a word of truth in it," Hoover replied. "Norman Davis is a very able citizen. No one should want to displace him. I would be the first to oppose such a move."

Washington (P)—The White House disclosed today that President Roosevelt, through Chairman Norman Davis of the Red Cross, had sought to have former President Hoover become a "sort of general manager" of relief for European sufferers.

Apparently Hoover had declined, the White House reported.

Stephen Early, a presidential secretary, said that about the time Germany was moving into Poland, Mr. Roosevelt and his advisers were doing what they could to prepare for what they believed would be an emergency.

In addition to taking steps to strengthen American defenses, revise the neutrality law and guard the position of the United States as a neutral, the president also was thinking about relief in Europe.

"As a preparatory step," Early said, "he asked Norman Davis, chairman of the Red Cross, to see Mr. Hoover and ascertain whether

Mr. Hoover would accept a post, the title of which might have been a sort of general manager of relief. "Apparently Mr. Davis saw Mr. Hoover and since nothing came of it apparently Mr. Hoover did not see fit to accept the offer."

N. Division Street Opened to Traffic At Franklin Street

City crews this week opened N. Division street from Franklin street to Washington street, according to Alfred Wickesberg, city engineer.

The street was opened over land which was a part of Washington street dump and was filled in over a period of years. An additional fill of earth is being put on the street which later will be graveled.

Wickesberg said the street will have a U shaped curve at Franklin street and the North Western railroad tracks but that condition will not be permanent. Temporary difficulties in moving tracks and switches prevented the engineer from laying the street straight at present.

When the street is completed, it will be possible for south bound cars on Division street to drive straight through to College avenue from Franklin street.

Kenosha Sheriff Heads State Group Former Chilton Official Named Treasurer of Association

Milwaukee (P)—The Wisconsin Sheriff's association elected Sheriff Leo C. Schend of Kenosha as its president at a concluding convention session here late yesterday.

Schend succeeds G. W. Booth, former sheriff of Fond du Lac county. Sheriff Frank Pepin of Chippewa Falls was named vice president; former Sheriff Fred T. Finn of Madison, secretary; former Sheriff John B. Dietrich of Chilton, treasurer, and Sheriff Owen Rex of Janesville, sergeant-at-arms. Louis D. Saichek, of Milwaukee, was reelected director.

In an address at the convention banquet last night Richard J. Lyons, Illinois Republican gubernatorial candidate, praised Wisconsin's "swift and sure" justice, stating:

"About the highest compliment that can be paid to your great commonwealth may be seen in the profound respect which the vast horde of crooks of nearby states have for the Wisconsin state line."

Referring to his own state of Illinois, Lyons asserted that unless drastic action is taken in the meantime, he would, if elected, order a "thorough and sweeping investigation of the Chicago courts and proceed forthwith to impeach and remove every corrupt and venal judge."

"The situation has already reached the stage where it should require the immediate attention of our state legislature."

Possibility of Germany and Allies Uniting Against Reds Not As Remote as It May Seem

BY DEWITT HICKENZIE

New York (P)—Hidden springs are being uncovered in European relationships at the League of Nations court-martial of Russia over the invasion of Finland.

The harsh feelings displayed between Moscow and the Anglo-French allies as a result of this imbroglio have created fresh talk regarding the real and the potential relations among the European powers.

Even in unemotional quarters some of the speculation has been startling, though no more so than is the muddled international situation of the old world.

One idea with which Europe just now is toying I heard put in words a couple of weeks ago at Yale university. We were seated around the Yale Press club camp-fire, so to speak, and somebody asked:

"Is there any possibility of Germany and the Anglo-French allies uniting ultimately against Soviet Russia?"

Not Far-Fetched
The questioner apologized for the query, saying he never had dared raise it before because it seemed so far-fetched. Well, he wasn't the only one thinking along that line, and the idea really isn't so far-fetched after all, when one analyzes the situation.

Fitting rather well into this picture was the debate in the British house of lords yesterday as to whether profitable peace could be made with Germany at this time.

many but anybody else from carrying out schemes of expansion which would challenge allied control. Intent on maintaining domination of the Mediterranean.

Italy—Seeking wider privileges in the Mediterranean area, more colonies, and politico-economic expansion into those same Balkans which both Russia and Germany have an eye on.

That's a sketchy outline of the powers' ambitions, but it's sufficient to show that there is a wholesale clash of interests among the Anglo-French, brotherhood, Germany and Russia. Each, after its own fashion, is seeking control—direct or indirect—of the same territory.

If the allies and Germany have anything at all in common at this juncture it is their: (1) very real fear of the spread of communism, and (2) their desire to keep Russia from pushing eastward in Europe and so spilling over into what they regard as their private stamping ground. With this Italy seems in hearty accord.

THE WAR ON THE SEA

Despite the fact that Germany has made some spectacular attacks upon the British Navy and Merchant Marine, there has been no really material harm done to British interests on the sea.

This is true if we are to accept at par the latest report to the Commons of Winston Churchill, First Lord of the Admiralty. And the report is not difficult to accept because it differs only slightly from the claims made on behalf of the Reich.

According to this report, Britain had approximately 21,000,000 tons of merchant shipping when the war began three months ago. To December she acquired additional tonnage to the extent of 280,000; and her losses due to enemy attacks of all sorts, whether direct or by floating or stationary mines, is placed at 340,000 tons. Here is a net loss of 60,000 tons out of 21,000,000. And that is hardly enough to talk about. Certainly it cannot be said to materially affect the goings and comings of the British Empire upon the high seas.

In respect to her war fleets, Britain announces the loss of about 50,000 tons out of a million. A large share of this was due to the intrepid work of a German submarine that nosed its way in and out of Scapa Flow, certainly the high spot so far in this fantastic war where steel-like courage and dependable nerves accomplished the seemingly impossible. And yet during the first three months of World War No. 1 the British Navy and Merchant Marine suffered twice the losses in this latest war.

Only those who go down to the sea in ships have a real comprehension of the vastness of British shipping. There are over 2,000 ocean-going ships flying the British flag and nearly 200 of these every day in the year arrive or leave ports in the British Isles. Even on those occasions when mines get in their deadly work or submarines play in luck, it must be evident that the destruction brought home to London, while painful, is not making any genuine headway upon its objective which is to deprive the United Kingdom of essentials in the way of food, clothing and war materials.

It is one of the contradictions and futilities of war that when one nation invents or discovers some offensive weapon of devastating force another nation, if equal in brains and energy, will discover or invent a defensive weapon to offset the value and advantage expected by its opponent through the advance which it may have made in science and invention.

There is no avoiding the fact that to date, at least, Britain has won the war on the sea, and won it so effectively that both German exports and imports are at a deadly standstill while her own shipping is not materially affected.

WHY MAIL EARLY?

Unless it might be today's news day after tomorrow, few things are more pointedly tardy than Christmas presents which arrive after the festivities are over and everyone is feeling slightly satiated.

That's one reason why the annual appeal from the postoffice department to mail early has a personal meaning. Everyone, of course, wants his presents to arrive on time. No one wants to give the impression that he had a last minute thought and rushed out belatedly to buy a token of remembrance. That certainly does not convey the idea of thoughtfulness.

But it is a practical fact that those who procrastinate in mailing run those risks. There is no question of the efficiency of the American postal system. It is the most efficient in the world. But the tremendous increase that comes at Christmas time is a challenge to the maximum of efficiency, notwithstanding the extra employees that are added each Yuletide. There are limits to what the postoffice department can accomplish—unless every second citizen be employed in the postoffice.

A special reason for mailing early this year can be found on the calendar which shows that Dec. 24 falls on Sunday and postoffices will be closed both that day and the next. Saturday is a short day, normally, and like most everyone else postoffice employees look forward to it as a breathing spell. Everyone who is thoughtful enough to mail his cards and parcels in time to be delivered on or before Dec. 22 will be making it possible for these employees to enjoy a fairly restful two-day Christmas. And they will also be making sure their remembrances will arrive when they should. Both ends will be in keeping with the Christmas spirit.

AN ACADEMIE FRANCAISE WOULD SAVE THE PROGRESSIVES

One of the high priests of the Inner Circle, Mr. Ickes by name, has denounced the handsome gentleman from the Wash-bash, McNutt, as none other than a Trotskyite by declaring "he is no liberal."

Over on the Seine what we know as the French Academy sits as a definer of words in the French language and an arbiter of the new words to be admitted.

Conditions in America simply scream out for something of this kind. Here is the handsome McNutt, probably considering himself a liberal, and here is Harold the Growler pushing him out into the dark with an accusation of apostasy. What in the world can be done about it?

If we had an American Academy composed of keen-minded scholars certain words in our political campaigns would be definitely outlined in their meaning and we imagine, somewhat as follows:

A Progressive is a hardy type of robust individual with some callouses upon his hands and a plowed-ground gait. His relation to politics in America has been, on the whole, practical, accompanied by deep research and cautious, workable planning.

But the academy would likely add to this definition another like this:

Liberal as a political word was taken from England where its last greatest accomplishment was directed by one Lloyd George in conjunction with the great French liberal, M. Clemenceau, and consists of the Treaty of Versailles. Liberals generally cannot see the difference between progress and socialism, they have lily white hands and handle sugar coated doughnuts at 4 p. m. in the most approved society fashion.

The advantage of a correct definition of words most sorely abused would put Mr. McNutt, we imagine, in a better frame of mind and require a little more caution by Harold the Scolder. But if we were at all accurate, and made any pretense of loyalty to even the recent history of our own country, how could we otherwise define the words than as above suggested? Hardly is there anything more cruel than to see the lily handed purrers, Fellow Travelers and all, steal the lightning from the hard working realistic Progressives.

But such are the ways of the world.

ANOTHER HIDDEN TAX

Tobacco dealers report that after a temporary lapse early this fall, when consumers momentarily resented the new cigarette tax, sales of cigarettes are normal again. The smoking public, several hundred thousand men and women of Wisconsin without reference to their ability to pay, during the next two years will surrender a total of $6,000,000 to the state treasury in such minute dribbles that they will hardly notice it.

The fact that three months after the imposition of a 15 per cent sales tax the volume of sales of that commodity should return to normal, the fact that the tax is hardly ever mentioned by the consumer although it is not yet 90 days old, supports the views of those independent observers who criticized the levy when it was introduced in the last legislature. It is precisely because the tax is not felt by the consumers, despite its gross inequality of application, that it is a dangerous tax.

In the next two years the cigarette smokers of Wisconsin are going to contribute to the state treasury an amount large enough to run the University of Wisconsin for a year, more than enough to run Outagamie county for a decade, a total equal to 60 per cent of the yield of the normal income tax, a sum greater than the state will expend for direct relief during the next two years, and those who pay it will hardly notice it.

They will pay an amount equal to the total annual earnings of 5,000 Wisconsin average workmen, but a great proportion of the taxpayers won't realize they're paying.

It will be another hidden tax, another stealthy imposition on the incomes and purchasing capacities of the people of Wisconsin.

Politicians and tax spenders prefer hidden taxes. They choose, whenever they can, to make their exactions upon us as painless as possible, not out of consideration for us, but because their own purposes are better served thus. They know that when the citizenry is conscious and alert to the burden of governmental cost, that citizenry is more eager, and more insistent, for caution in government spending.

It is one of the disturbing aspects of Wisconsin politics that a legislature which coldly rejected income tax proposals because it feared the political consequences, and which consistently refused to enact direct taxes, succeeded with little trouble in enacting the cigarette tax, one which transgresses almost every accepted rule and concept of fairness and science in public financing.

It is even more disturbing to read treasury reports of its yield, for the millions are rolling in so plentifully, effortlessly, and they are being spent too eagerly and rapidly, that we can have the strongest doubts that this newest assessment on our pocketbooks will ever be repealed.

DALE HARRISON'S In Old New York

New York — City Scenes:

Scene 1 — In New York there is an elderly man living on Relief. In Hollywood is a young man living on a movie star's salary. The poor old man and the popular young one are father and son.

Not many years ago they lived here together, as families should — the father, the mother and the son. The father worked, supporting them as best he knew how. It was not extravagant living, but it was comfortable, which is better.

One day the father returned from his labors to find them gone — the wife of his choice, the son of their union. From that day to this he has heard no direct word from them; not even so much as a post card.

Maybe the wife and son had good reason to leave. Outsiders cannot know what goes on in a family's secret heart. Still, postcards are only a penny; and the man is terribly alone. As soon as the father learned where they had gone he began sending them things—money and clothes, whatever his modest wages made possible. Even though they had deserted him, they were his. All the neglect and indifference in the world by the son could not blot away a single drop of the paternal blood in his veins.

The son became a Star. If you go to the movies at all, you have seen him. You may even like him. I don't and never did.

Filial indifference, uxorial ingratitude—that is all there is to the story; all, except that to this very day the father goes without the necessities of life, saving a few coins from his Relief check and buying little gifts to send to his wife and son—to the wife and son who can't spare even a penny to send him a postcard: "Having Fine Time, Wish You Were Here . . ."

Scene 2—Before Richard Whitney was sent to Sing Sing he had some of his clothes made by a lively little Russian tailor who has a modest shop on a side street and is none too prosperous.

Before headlines blazed with Whitney's money troubles, word of his impending disaster reached the tailor, and it was unhappy news, for Whitney owed him several thousand dollars.

He went to the financier, asking for his pay. Whitney couldn't settle because he didn't have it. Instead — and perhaps it was with a sense of humor — he gave the little tailor the Whitney membership in an exclusive club.

The tall and stately Whitney became a convict. The lively, and somewhat comical, little tailor became a Clubman.

It is ultra exclusive, ultra conservative, this Club. Memberships are highly prized and closely guarded. Had he offered all the money in the world, the tailor could never have bought his way into it—yet here he was, in. He wasn't First Family. He was First Avenue.

So now he goes to the Club. I heard he is very funny as he patters pompously into the meetings and sits down proudly among the Fine Gentlemen. When there are discussions, he discusses. Dis is a free Contree, I'm telling you, ain't it? Dis is a free man is like free other me equal, I'm telling you—ain't it?

The Fine Gentlemen do not appreciate Mr. Whitney's humor. They do not want little Russian tailors in their Club. They already have offered the fellow a quarter of a million dollars to relinquish his membership.

The little tailor shakes his head. He says: Nuttings doing what you're spickin' about, Gentlemen—Nuttings doing, whatsoever.

Scene 3—She is not a day over 11 years old, and very pretty. Her abundant blonde hair is held with a neatly tied pink ribbon. Her ginghams dress is faded almost white with too many washings, but it is clean. One expects poverty at 11th Avenue and 56th Street but not such sweet poverty.

The light turns red, stopping traffic. The child runs from the curb, hops surely onto the running board of the nearest automobile, and with a rag in her pudgy hand, begins briskly wiping the windshield. All over town the gamins do this, and it is a nuisance and annoyance to motorists; but the little blonde lady of 11th Avenue is different. She smiles. Her eyes sparkle; and she is neat and clean.

The motorist hands her a coin. Her fingers clasp it tightly as she jumps from the running board into the street. She murmurs: "My mother thanks you, sir."

Charm on 11th Avenue—just a Kid—wiping windshields.

Looking Backward

10 YEARS AGO
Thursday, Dec. 12, 1929

Mrs. Lloyd Doerfler was elected president of the Marchia club at the Christmas party held Wednesday evening at the home of Mrs. Fred Jentz, W. Summer street. Mrs. E. A. Knoke was named secretary.

Miss Betty Meyer, representative of Appleton High school, took first place in the Fox River Valley Declamatory contest at Manitowish Wednesday. She read "The Tragedy of Gowns" by Edna Ferber.

Two students had been chosen for the Kaukauna High school debate squad. They were Roland Beyer, Jewell Huebner, Evelyn Gerhart, Alice May Whitfield, Alice Balgie, Herman Maer, Victor Haen, Rosella Ott, Alta Pahl, Corrine Mayer, Robert Mayer, E. Miller.

25 YEARS AGO
Thursday, Dec. 17, 1914

Mercury in the government thermometer at Thiede's sank to 8 degrees below zero the previous night, the same as the low mark of the previous Sunday night.

Christmas programs were to be held in the various schools Friday afternoon.

The outgoing Christmas mail had reached a stage where an extra clerk was necessary and Joseph Jungworth was added to the postal force.

The second boiler was put into operation at the Y.M.C.A. building the previous afternoon and with a few more radiators installed, plastering work was to be started on the fourth floor before the week was over.

A Verse for Today

By Anne Campbell

DECEMBER'S ROSES

December's roses are the loveliest,
In a clear crystal vase, beside the window glowing.
The frost is etched upon the pane, and it is snowing.
December's roses make the winter blent.

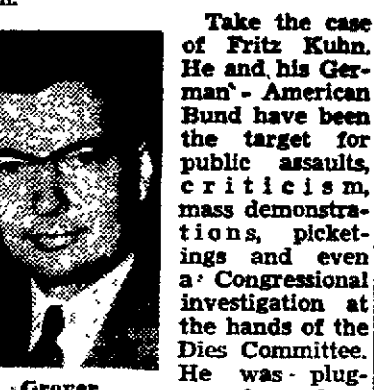

Summer has found her way from prison cell
And dusky cavern, smiling through the tail red roses.
Upon the winter scene outside the tired eye closes
To look down summer's paths, remembered well.

The wintertime of life will come at last,
But every bleak December has its lovely flowers.
The fragrant petals of remembered hours
That form the roses of the treasured past.

A Bystander In Washington

BY FRESTON GROVER

Washington—The law works in mysterious ways its wonders to perform.

Take the case of Fritz Kuhn. He and his German-Bund have been the target for public assaults, criticism, mass demonstrations, picketings and even a Congressional investigation at the hands of the Dies Committee.

He was plugging for a forum for a group of most people consider fundamentally contrary to the Constitution and a jeopardy to the liberties upon which the country prides itself. A lot of people thought something ought to be done about it. It was. He was accused of larceny and found guilty by a jury. Even the presiding judge suspected that the jury was likely to smack him down because they thought it might be a good idea on general principles. So he cautioned carefully against it. No matter what the jury might think of the Bund and its German connection, and Fritz Kuhn in particular the jurist counseled that Kuhn was charged only with larceny of Bund funds and should be judged on that alone. The jury did its duty according to its lights.

Legally it is a kind of spinner play, in which the ball carrier has one thing in mind but makes believe he is planning something else. The Bundster was convicted of a crime against the people in taking Bund funds, but it is a safe bet that most of the people wouldn't have cared a whoop if he had spent all the Bund's funds, down to the last dollar.

Cases even fuller of contradictions are those of Earl Browder, General Secretary of the Communist Party in America, and Harry Bridges, the West Coast labor leader. Probably the same class of people are soured on those two that are soured on the Bund business. Your average customer, including this one, couldn't draw an extremely wide and clear line between Communism and Nazism, particularly of late. There was a wide-spread national annoyance at the whole business.

And what method was adopted to "do something about it?"

Browder was known Communist. He had run for President on the Communist ticket. Before Congressional committee he conceded there was a fairly close tie up between his organization and the Russian original. But, it seems there was no law against that. In Mr. Browder's case it was quite legal to be a Communist. Nevertheless, one of the things developed was that Browder had traveled in Europe on a passport not bearing his true name. For that he was indicted. He is yet to be tried.

Case Of Bridges

Now take the case of Bridges. He denies he is a Communist. He is a West Coast labor leader who has tied up more ships in his time than the neutrality act.

He was brought up for examination as to whether he should be deported. He was born an Australian but while he has lived 20 years in the United States he never has become a citizen. If it could be demonstrated that he was the sort of Communist who advocated the overthrow of the government by force, he would likely be deported. Dean Landis of the Harvard Law school is passing on the business now. He conducted the hearing.

Capone Tripped Up

The case of Al Capone is one of different flavor, but the law came in through the back gate to get him, also. As the principal racketeer of the tempestuous Twenties, he was suspected of all sorts of crimes. While members of his various " mobs" were caught up after time, Capone escaped, rarely even being mentioned.

But the mass feeling that "something ought to be done about it" found expression in an odd way. He made more money in the beer racket than he ever paid taxes on. He was convicted of income tax cheating and served a term in the Federal Reformatory, where, mightily few other tax dodgers have been sent.

Just a Step Behind the News

By Dave Boone

Well, Soviet Russia still insists she isn't in any war of any kind against anybody, particularly against Finland, and wants to know how the League of Nations ever got such a quaint idea. Molotov just replied to the Geneva note by sticking to the story that he is stuck with it.

If you took all the countries today that said they were not really at war and were not by any chance aggressors in any trouble and posed them together for a photograph, it would show the largest meeting of the Ananias club in history.

The British people are still up in the air over the way the Bremen manages to get around. It sure is embarrassing to a nation that claims to rule the waves to know that the prize ship of the German merchant marine can not only elude the fleet once, but do it as a double feature.

On the whole, trip from Murnansk to Bremerhaven, the Bremen didn't get a peek at anything British except a Chautauqua salute, which merely gave it a too critical.

But let's not be so too literal. There's a chance that the nazis were using the Bremen as a decoy, isn't there? With all those bombers conveying the ship, maybe the British navy was being deceived. But it seems strange to associate the British navy with extreme caution.

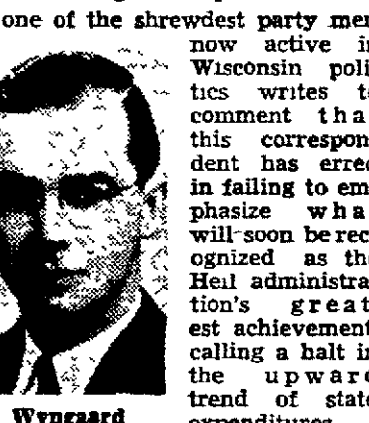

DON'T BLAME FACTORIES FOR ALL THE UNEMPLOYMENT

Under the Capitol Dome

BY JOHN WYNGAARD

Madison—An up-state Republican leader regarded by this column as one of the shrewdest party men

Wyngaard

That complaint is possibly justified, but it must also be qualified. Governor Heil has halted the heretofore steady increase in state operating costs. But it is also true that the total state budget during his term is higher than that of any of his predecessors. In the popular view, then, costs have not been reduced. Some expenditures have been pared, but others have been boosted to such an extent that the total is greater than it has ever been before Heil's term.

CREDIT COMING

Because the details are somewhat complicated, it is probably true that the high budget total has overclouded the fact that the Heil administration has effected broad and significant curtailments in the operations of state departments and institutions. It is up to the Republicans to convince the people that the distribution of state funds under their regime is preferable to the system in effect now. They have formally accepted the policy of increasing welfare expenditures and state aids to local governments, by far the heaviest costs in the state government, and they have cut severely in such expenditures as payrolls, educational and charitable institutions, travel expenses, etc., a secondary, in total cost, part of the state budget.

The Republicans can with complete good faith take the stump next fall and assert that they have fulfilled their pledges for economy. The difficult part of their job will be, however, the fact that last fall their spokesmen were using the La Follette budget totals for purposes of comparison, and they unfortunately created a public impression that a Republican administration would manage to get along with less than that amount.

Yet the Republicans can hardly be blamed either for increasing welfare appropriations, for every political party in Wisconsin last fall was vying with the others in promising for old age pensions, for example.

EXTRANEUS DIVERSIONS

The Republican correspondent hints that the press generally hasn't given the Heil administration and the Republican party full credit for their achievements this year. He probably believes what is in the minds of many intelligent party men who are already planning the mode of attack for 1940.

One of their greatest difficulties, it appears to this observer, is that their standard-bearer, Mr. Heil, has so frequently appeared ridiculous to the public—one national magazine constantly refers to him as "Julius the Bust"—that the work of his administration has been minimized. Governor Heil has habits not ordinarily expected of politicians in high office, habits of speaking spontaneously, and pleasant little hobbies, such as appointing colonels, which capture public attention far more rapidly than the fact that the public service commission budget has been cut.

Unfortunately, too, Mr. Heil and

MELANCHOLY DAYS

Perhaps they were melancholy days a hundred years ago. What with automatic heat control and air conditioning and everything they are comparatively cheerful days now, don't you think? Well, then, if you still insist they are melancholy you can hop in the bus and travel southwest for a week or so, or ride the train for two or three days, or fly for a few hours and be right back in summer, any time.

Even if you have to stay on the job all winter there is a simple way to keep the days from being too melancholy and the nights from being too trying through the winter. I refer to air conditioning. If an efficient system or equipment for the purpose is not built in your abode or your place of occupation, you can install a simple, practical, efficient humidifier in each or every room where any kind of heating is used. This is the important part of air-conditioning — adding sufficient moisture to the air which becomes excessively dried out by any form of artificial heating.

It is not only for physical comfort and good nature that it is worth while. Another benefit, less manifest until you've had a season of experience with it, is the relief proper humidifying of the heated air brings to one with any kind of chronic respiratory trouble such as rhinitis, sinusitis, bronchitis, laryngitis, and the increase in natural immunity to acute respiratory infections.

Such humidifiers are now obtainable in almost any place, or a man handy with a soldering iron or tank can make his own. The thing consists of a metal box or tank with a metal top or cover to exclude dust but with ample openings at the sides for free passage of air. A wire frame supports many folds or loops of absorbent wicking or material like turkish toweling which hangs over the wire so that many loops dip into the water. The box or tank stands on radiator, register, heater or stove, and evaporates a gallon or more of water daily. When enough water is evaporated daily—as a rule fifteen or twenty gallons daily is a moderate requirement in a house of average size—the atmosphere will be most comfortable for all occupants. If the temperature is not permitted to rise above 70, preferably kept between 65 and 68 degrees F.

Proper humidifying of artificially heated air in dwelling, office, store or other building, is a definite builder of life. Remember, vile means: "Preservation of the characteristics of youth . . . greater pep . . . more vitality . . . the highest degree of natural immunity."

This attention to proper humidifying, in my opinion, really does tend to maintain natural immunity against (kree) — any and all of the Common Respiratory Infections, by keeping the mucous membrane lining the respiratory tract in a more nearly normal state.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

Can you suggest some cream or other cosmetic for a middle aged woman to use to retard the coming of wrinkles, flabbiness and others called against taxes last fall, although one of the best publicized results of the legislative session was an increase of about $7,000,000 in state taxes. It has been pointed out time and time again that the state financial situation encountered by Heil made that action imperative. But the public remembers the campaign speeches, in this instance anyway.

Where They Came From Christmas Cards

Who invented the Christmas card? Some persons give credit to Sir Henry Cole, whose suggestion to J. C. Horsley resulted in Christmas cards printed by Joseph Cundall of London in 1846. In lithography, and colored by hand, 1,000 cards were published. The work started in August. Other persons think W. C. T. Dobson beat Sir Henry to the idea. By 1850 the Christmas card began to be a major problem for delivery by December 25.

Red Cross, Hoover Campaign Double Up on Finnish Relief

BY RAYMOND CLAPPER

Washington—At his press conference President Roosevelt discounted reports of "competition" between the American Red Cross and the Finnish relief agency headed by former President Hoover.

There is a good deal more to the story than that because Red Cross officials say no need exists for such a fund drive as is now being organized and they are not happy over the situation. That was what was behind the statement issued by Norman H. Davis, chairman of the American Red Cross, who advised his chapters that while contributions for sufferers in all war countries are welcomed, the American Red Cross, mindful of domestic responsibilities, has not felt that the needs abroad were such as yet to make necessary a major campaign for a war relief fund.

The Red Cross is providing medical help and other forms of assistance and its officials say that to date all requests from the Finnish Red Cross have been fulfilled. Although President Roosevelt said Finnish relief needs undoubtedly would increase, Red Cross officials say that if the Russians do not occupy the country, no large relief contributions are likely to be necessary there, and if the Russians do move in, the bolsheviks will not tolerate outside assistance to the Finnish people. Large credits needed by the Finnish government for general purposes fall outside the scope of relief activities and are being handled by this government through the export-import bank.

The background of the reports to which President Roosevelt alluded is, according to those involved in the situation here as follows. Two months ago, when Poland was invaded, President Roosevelt sent word to Mr. Hoover through an emissary asking if he would take over a coordinated relief effort. Mr. Hoover said he would be glad to issue a public invitation to Mr. Hoover. He felt that it would go far toward encouraging unity among the American people to have the former president handling relief activities in the United States at the invitation of the government. Best Bet Now is to Let Red Cross Handle it.

Mr. Hoover, it is stated, declined on the ground that he did not wish to become in this way identified with the administration. However, Mr. Hoover did want to be in the relief picture and was said to have proposed to Red Cross officials that to work in Finland. Thus the wires became crossed where they remain at the moment, causing no end of sputtering. Both sides apparently deplore the situation which has developed and some way out is being sought. Mr. Hoover has publicly offered to turn over funds raised by him to the Red Cross. No direct offer has been received but that looks like the most sensible solution, and certainly the most economical. The Red Cross emphasizes that its overhead cost already is taken care of so that 100 per cent of the contributions go to relief whereas, so Red Cross experts say, Mr. Hoover would have to count on deducting perhaps 25 per cent for overhead expenses.

New Drug Reported Effective in Drive To Conquer Syphilis

Chicago—A new drug for syphilis which is the first of its kind to be effective when taken by mouth has been released to doctors generally.

The drug, a powder that can be swallowed in capsule form, was discovered at Stanford university's medical school and has been tested for almost four years in some of the nation's leading clinics.

Formal acceptance of the medicine was given today in the Journal of the American Medical Association by its council on pharmacy and chemistry. The drug can be obtained only by prescription.

Heretofore the standard treatment for syphilis has been alternating injections of arsenic compounds into the veins and bismuth compounds into the hip muscles.

The new drug, also a compound of metal bismuth, and called bismuthol mass, permits elimination of bismuth injections—but it must be taken in conjunction with injections of one of the arsenical compounds.

Its discoverer, Dr. Paul J. Hanzlik, head of Stanford's pharmacology department, and his associates found that it would do what other bismuth compounds apparently were unable to do when taken orally—resist digestion and penetrate the stomach and intestinal walls to be absorbed into the blood stream.

Such penetration is necessary to reach and help kill syphilis germs, which spread to all the body's organs and tissues.

Strategic Bid Proves Paying Proposition

By Ely Culbertson
Dear Mr. Culbertson: Here is a 'fast one' which my wife recently put over in a social game:
"South, dealer.
"East-West vulnerable.

"The bidding:
South West North East
Pass Pass 1 spade 2 no trump
Double Pass 3 spades Double
Pass Pass Pass

"I was South. My wife, who never bids psychics, was North. Before I even asserted my cards, East (an extremely nervous and excitable player) remarked that it was my bid. A kibitzer, who had not seen East's cards, remarked that he must have a good hand, which was indeed quite obvious from his demeanor. My wife must have thought so, too, hence her psychic, followed by East's horrible two no trump bid.
"After doubling, East went into quite a huddle for his opening lead and finally produced the three of spades. West won with the king and returned a spade. East cashed the jack and ace, then led the club ace and clubs six. The club jack won, and a small diamond was led and doubled. Then another round of spades followed, upon which East discarded the club queen. This left North with one spade, her original four hearts, and the club ten. East held on to the J-9-7-2 of hearts and the A-Q of diamonds. Dummy at this point, had three hearts to the ace, the K-10 of diamonds, and the king of clubs. West's cards did not matter. The lead of the club ten to dummy's king finished East. Obviously, if he had led go a heart, all of declarer's hearts would have been good. His actual discard of the diamond queen, however, was no better. Declarer now ruffed the diamond king, thereby establishing the diamond king for a heart discard—C. S. Hines."

The hand was very well played, and North is to be congratulated for providing against the possibility that the heart suit would not break. I cannot agree, however, that North's bid was a pure psychic. Admittedly, North's hand was far below the requirements for an orthodox opening bid, but with six spades to the queen and four of the other major headed by K-Q-10, not to mention a void in diamonds, there was real offensive strength in the hand. I am not saying that a hand of this type should be opened, even in third position, under all circumstances. But with the vulnerability conditions as they were, I am inclined to think that such an opening, as a strategic bid, is a paying proposition, regardless of the histrionics that may and may not be displayed by the four hands. Of course, my correspondent's point about a player indicating his holding through excitement or nervousness is well taken, and I also agree that East's two no trump overcall of the one spade was "horrible." A simple one no trump overcall, or a take-out double, would have amply expressed East's holding. A two no trump overcall in this position, showing an enormous hand, about eight certain winners.
Strangely enough, if East had made the proper overcall, the opponents probably never would have reached a game-going contract, that is, South would have doubled one no trump, and if West stayed out of the bidding, North would have rescued this double with only two spades. This, East certainly could not have doubled, and the opponents would have been left in an innocuous part-score contract.

My Neighbor Says—

Look over dahlia bulbs stored for the winter. If they seem dry or shriveled, sprinkle them with water.

If orange-flavored pie crust is used when making mince pies the flavor of pie will be delicious. To make the crust, use orange juice instead of water in mixing the dough for crust.

The lower part of each hybrid rose bush should now be covered with earth mounded up. Dried leaves or boughs are then spread over the earth.

White materials that are yellow with age may be restored by soaking them in buttermilk. If only slightly yellowed, a few days are sufficient to render the material perfectly white, but in severe cases more time is required. Change the milk occasionally.

Beauty and You

by PATRICIA LINDSAY

This square-faced girl wears frames which are broader on top than bottom to minimize the width of her jaw line. The high, swept coiffure has a flattering back fullness.

How to be attractive and still wear eye glasses, was the theme of a press party recently given by a leading Fifth Avenue beauty authority.
"Few women realize that with glasses chosen to harmonize with their face shape and skin tone, with a coiffure especially styled to detract from the glasses, and with proper make-up, they can be far more attractive in appearance than women who do not wear glasses," she stated. "The long-faced girl looks better in round, large frames. For a woman who goes about straining her eyes, has a perpetually tired look, numerous little face lines and encourages a dowager's hump!"

At the party we were told that a square-faced girl should wear glasses broader at the top than at the bottom to minimize the breadth of her face. "The long-faced girl looks better in round, large frames as they help to fill out her face. The color of frames depends upon the individual skin tone and the only way to determine which is least conspicuous is to try on the various models.

Quite naturally care of the skin was emphasized for attention is drawn to the face if you wear glasses. Keep your skin smooth-textured through daily care and by all means use a foundation cream or lotion beneath your make-up. This helps to keep your powder and rouge intact as you put on and take off your specks!

Wear your rouge rather high on your cheek bones to counteract the shadows from your lenses. Blend it well and use a bit more than you would if you did not wear glasses.

According to this authority, eye make-up is supremely important. Shadow on your lids should intensify the color of your iris, mascara should emphasize the tips of your lashes (not the whole length) and a bit of tissue oil over the eyeshadow helps to make your eyes glisten behind the lenses.

Two hair styles, in the modern manner, were shown as those most becoming to goggle eyes. By all means wear your hair softly and for most faces it should be drawn back from the temples slightly to throw your face features in prominence. Soft full curls, or deep waves are more becoming than the severe stylized coiffures.

One flattering coiffure had "front interest"—a bustle of soft full curls worn rather high on the forehead. The other hairdo had "back interest" and was called the snood coiffure. It had a clever arrangement of soft full, sculptured curls over the temples, with the back hair combed out in a fluff to balance the eye glasses on a thin face.

Selecting Hats
Even hats were considered and Sally Victor presented some very flattering models. A rust-colored antelope had a slight victory effect.

with a cascade of cog feathers falling softly down one side to the cheek. A casual hat of brown felt had a brim which swept up one side in a dashing line and was lined with turquoise suede which was flattered to the skin. For formal wear, she showed a cleverly draped turban of blue velvet which came down slantwise on the right side of the forehead while the left side was softened beautifully with gay fuchsia velvet flowers. The model wore flesh-colored framed glasses, and they were hardly noticeable.

"How to Keep a Blemished Skin Beautiful" is available upon request if you write me care of this paper, and enclose a self-addressed, stamped (3-cent) envelope.

Good Taste Today By Emily Post

Dear Mrs. Post: Don't you think it would be a good idea to suggest that return addresses be written on envelopes of all letters? Frequently, I am asked by business people why Mrs. Post doesn't write something on this subject. I am told that hundreds of letters—even wedding invitations and social letters—are returned yearly to the post office because they bear no return address. Perhaps many people who know do not think seriously of this detail might realize its importance if you put the seal of approval on the return address.

Answer: According to long established traditions of taste, formal social notes should not have addresses of senders on the envelopes. However, in cases of doubt as to correct address, this rule may be waived.

Regarding other mail, I have written in my book "Etiquette the Blue Book of Social Usage," "Business letters should have the addresses of their senders clearly printed so that in case the letter is not delivered it may be returned without delay. But when we write personal letters to our friends it is scarcely necessary to notify them, on the outside of the envelope, of our full name and address. In fact, there are times when the address of the sender on an envelope is embarrassing and even improper. A young woman, let us say, writes a man and every one in his fraternity house, or his club, or his office knows that his letter is from Miss Laura Lovely . . . Small gummed labels, which are to be had at all stationers, are useful for those occasions when a return address is necessary."

And lately, at the request of the United States Post Office, I have written in a small booklet called "The Etiquette of Letter Writing," which is advertised frequently at the end of these daily columns, that it is considered permissible and even advisable to put all return addresses—social as well as business—on the face of an envelope. This is because of the extra handling required of postal clerks who must look for addresses of senders when letters have to be returned.

I am sorry, however, that I can't put the seal of approval on a return address on engraved invitations and their answers. An engraved invitation is the most extreme example of formality, and writing anything other than the superscription is out of place. All addresses should be checked for accuracy before the envelopes are addressed and even if one or two happen not to be correct, the name and address contained in the engraving of the invitation itself will provide sufficient information to insure its return.

Mrs. Post is sorry she can no longer answer personal letters. She is glad, however, to have many printed slips on a variety of subjects to offer to her readers. Today's slip is "Writing Materials." Be sure to send a three-cent stamped, self-addressed envelope with your request to Mrs. Post in care of this paper, P. O. Box 150, Times Square Station, New York, N. Y.

Send ten cents in coin for this pattern to Appleton Post-Crescent, Needlecraft Dept., 32 Eighth Avenue, New York, N. Y. Write plainly Pattern number, your Name and Address.

Accuracy, Thoroughness Part of School Training

BY ANGELO PATRI

"Miss Marie, I have this example right and you marked it wrong."
"Let me see it."
"See it is. I have the right answer."
"Where is the decimal point?"
"I was in a hurry and left it out, but you can see what I mean."
"I can't help what you mean. That kind of example is either done correctly or it is not done at all. You know the value of that decimal point, don't you? Then how can you feel that it is right to leave it out?"
If you think this is fussy think it over. What good is there in working an example and disregarding the importance of a decimal point? The result as set down is wrong. Inaccuracy is unpardonable in any form of mathematics. A mathematician cannot afford to be wrong. That's why he is a mathematician—so we can depend upon his accuracy, his being right.

It is not just for the mathematical accuracy that the teacher is so stern about such points. A missing exponent, a misplaced sign, a missing point render the whole process valueless from a highly important standpoint—the spiritual one.

When educational researchers announce that skill in one subject does not lend skill in another subject he utters, in my opinion, a limited truth. Accuracy is a skill, and accuracy can become a habit and develop into a positive affection for truth in all things, for thoroughness in all ways; and these are two essential qualities of good character. There may be no space for them in the report blanks, but there is plenty of regard for them in the world.

Teach a pupil to go over his work carefully, check it twice, looking for errors, not agreement. Teach them to prove their work and to test its accuracy, and when they have learned this lesson they have achieved power and a quality of intelligence beyond price. And that will improve all other work they touch.

This improvement does not imply an acquirement of talents. A child who is markedly poor in certain subjects is likely to be mediocre in them consistently. But it does imply a strengthening of a mental attitude that must be a great source of power. It supplies resistance to difficulties, persistence and endurance and in time this attitude and its resulting qualities becomes habitual. The decimal point is important.

Thoroughness is essential in early schooling. What we teach, the child must learn thoroughly and accurately. When he says,

"I forgot," he means, "I did not learn it thoroughly," which is saying he did not learn at all. One telling, once doing, one of any kind of, experience is rarely enough to fix an idea or a process. One telling and one practice is a little better, but still not enough. We must keep at the telling and the practice and the expression until the learning is through, and can no more be forgotten than the child's own name.

Tables, words, spelling, rules must be learned and applied in practice, thoroughly. If that is old-fashioned, then so is human nature. It still requires the push of stern necessity, the hard hand of accuracy, the unrelenting tenacity of truth to cause it to be born again, in spirit.

Mr. Patri has prepared a leaflet entitled, "Poor Readers," in which he gives parents many suggestions on how to help children to improve their reading. Send for it, addressing your request to Mr. Angelo Patri, in care of this paper, P. O. Box 150, Times Square Station, New York, N. Y. Enclose a self-addressed, stamped (3-cent) envelope.

Mr. Patri will give personal attention to inquiries from parents and school teachers on the care and development of children. Write him care of this paper, enclosing a three-cent stamped, addressed envelope for reply.

CASE RECORDS OF A PSYCHOLOGIST

By Dr. George W. Crane
Psychologist, Northwestern University

John was a postmaster of applied psychology. He used clever attention attracting devices; was expert in public platform strategy; could parry questions and reverse them to the confusion of their propounders. But some of our present day religious educational leaders are so stupid as regards psychology that they are a serious liability to the church. We also need a housecleaning in religious education.

Case P-128: Billy M., aged 8, lives in our neighborhood.
"I want to go to the movies," he coaxed and pleaded one Sunday afternoon recently, while I was visiting with his parents.

"But this is Sunday. Besides, you went to the movies yesterday," his mother replied.

"But I want to go today," he repeated.

"Dr. Crane, he didn't go to Sunday school this morning," his mother turned to me, "so do you think I ought to let him go to the movies again this afternoon?"

Diagnosis: Our churches could learn some good psychology from the theater. Few parents have to force their youngsters to attend a movie.

Indeed, such an action would rate headlines in the newspaper as a very unusual event.

The movies exert a positive pull or appeal to children. Many of our churches and Sunday schools fail to entice children by similar positive appeals.

In fact, the churches may fall into a neutral if not actually a negative category as regards our children. This means that faulty psychology is being used regarding their religious motivation.

It is far wiser to coax individuals along from in front, than to drive them along from behind. The movies do the former.

Why Billy Liked The Movies
But Billy had another inducement.

FOR SCHOOL

BY ANNE ADAMS

"Teacher's pet" is the bright little scholar whose smart mother dresses her in this three-piece outfit, Anne Adams' Pattern 4273. The jumper is ingeniously designed for easy making, for both the front and back panels continue up in one piece to form the straps. The sides are also cut in one easy piece with no side seams—just darts for nice fit. A wonderful time-saver and smart, too, for they are bias-cut to give a swing to the hemline. The decorative scalloped buttoning is convenient for little fingers. A sweet blouse is included with the pattern. Keep the diagrammed Sew Chart close at hand for short-cut guidance in cutting and stitching.

Pattern 4273 is available in children's sizes 4, 6, 8, 10 and 12. Size 6 takes 2 1/2 yards 35 inch fabric and blouse, 3 yard contrast; jumper and blouse, 4 yards. didn't watch him, no. She just saw him coming while she held the door open for the boy. And then, a few minutes after the boy had driven off, she saw Mr. Deane crossing the campus toward the Horseshoe, on his way home. But that doesn't mean a thing. Everybody who lives out here has to pass along the back of that residence to get home. Deane passes there almost exactly at the same time every day.

Forrester filled his pipe. "Does the butcher boy call at the same time every day?"

"Approximately."

Forrester lit the pipe carefully and smoked for a moment in silence. "You've had the body of the dog analyzed? There might be reaction there is the poison."

"There's none in the body of Jethro's cat. As for the dog. . . . Michael got up and sauntered to the door. "Do you suppose dogs have souls? Freddie must have one. Because he's walked. I tried to dig him up just an hour or two after we buried him. Freddie had gone."

Sunday dawned bright and clear and warm, a perfect day for a tea party in the garden. Tuck had the wicker table set out of the sun on the east side of the house, facing Miss Lissey's.

Whether the Devoes and Mrs. Murchison would accept Tuck's invitation had been rather a matter for speculation. It seemed scarcely possible that they would after Jared Devoe's elaborately constructed alibi for them, and considering the fact that Tuck was violating one of society's rules in inviting them when they had not called upon her. But in spite of everything, they came, at four o'clock—almost too promptly, Tuck thought.

Mrs. Murchison had gownned herself in red... a color quite inappropriate for Sunday afternoon in the garden but Mrs. Murchison obviously was not thinking of the garden.

Her eyes flashed at Michael as she shook hands with him, and Tuck got a sudden shock, a sudden insight into the woman's mind. Did she think that her smile might accomplish what Devoe's disarming manner had failed to do? Tuck stifled a mental cry.

"Yes," she said to him, "I'm glad you could come. We have been looking forward to coming," the red lips said, just as sweetly. The eyes were so dark it was difficult to read any expression in them.

Subjects for Conversation
Mrs. Devoe stood behind her. She looked ill. Her eyes were heavy and lustless, and the flesh on her cheeks hung flabby and pendulous as if she had suddenly lost weight. She was in black again, a heavy shapless black, that somehow seemed more sinister than the red. Tuck shook herself.

"It's a lovely day, Mrs. Devoe." "Yes," Her hand was limp—limp and cold.

"I think you'll find this chair comfortable," Michael said as he greeted her. She sank into it without a word of thanks, and sat there all afternoon as inscrutable as any Buddha. Inscrutable but never unnoticing. Her heavy eyes saw every movement.

Her son was as affable and polished as ever. He complimented Tuck on the condition of the garden and moved on to Bunny with suspicious haste. Bunny sat quietly in her chair, and let him talk into her ear without evincing the slightest interest in what he was saying.

Mrs. Murchison and Michael drifted off together. Tuck caught one gray amused glance from Bunny, and turned resolutely back to old Mrs. Devoe. She picked a subject out of the air at random, as one reaches for a mosquito on a hot summer night.

"Have you seen our lovely sundial?" she asked. "I suppose you must have when your niece lived here."

The heavy lids fluttered for the merest instant, and the eyes turned toward Tuck. "My niece?" Devoe broke in. "It was the sundial she spoke of mother," he said with a swift glance that Tuck caught.

"The sundial. Yes. Yes. I have seen it."

"I never owned a sundial before. They're so romantic, aren't they?" Mrs. Devoe did not answer, and Tuck was casting about wildly for another subject when she saw with relief Miss Lissey, smart in a flowered chiffon, coming hastily down the outer path.

Tuck almost liked Miss Lissey at the moment. Certainly, she told herself, there would be no more of these awkward pauses in the conversation. Then she remembered what Dr. McBain had told Michael about the Devoe-Lissey contretemps, and groaned inwardly. That would probably stop even Miss Lissey's agile tongue.

But other than a slight raising of her chin Miss Lissey showed in no way her discomfiture at Devoe, and Devoe was very polite, if a trifle distant, with Miss Lissey, so affairs moved rather more smoothly than might have been expected.

But the afternoon was fated not to go smoothly; not with the ease and lack of restraint that had characterized Mrs. Deane's party. It may have been the fact that the Forresters and Bunney... and Dr. McBain too, when he finally arrived...

...were putting every movement, every word, under a strong microscope, that put the tension into the atmosphere. Not only that, but Tuck had a feeling that everyone, excepting perhaps Mrs. Deane and Mrs. McBain, was conscious of this. There was apprehension, wonder, mystery, even fear in the air. No conversation seemed able to live.

Tuck decided mentally that it was no use to keep to harmless subjects. With an air of utter innocence she introduced one, that might have a sting... of which she, of course, couldn't be expected to know. The servant problem.

"We were told that it was very difficult to keep a maid out here," she commented. "But, luckily, Charlotte Jean likes it very much, and hasn't any notion of leaving us. I'm very thankful."

Mrs. Deane, hot and puffing as usual, spoke. "I have always a perfectly terrible time with servants. I always think my boy Gordon just might have something to do with it. He's very trying, at least."

we find him so, even ourselves. Really, I don't know what to do about it, so I rarely try to keep a maid at all."

"There was a curiously furtive look in Marie Murchison's eyes. She glanced at Tuck with a little frown, then looked immediately away."

"Well, I have an old country girl and I couldn't get along without her," Miss Lissey said. "She's hard working and sensible, and she hasn't any of the silly notions of servants in this country. She belongs to the servant class, and she knows it, and she stays where she belongs."

"Is there a servant class, Miss Lissey?" Bunny asked.

"Of course there is. Some people are born to be ladies' maids just as some aren't. Let them keep to their own levels, I say. It's no use their trying to pretend they belong to another class." She tossed her head angrily, and the red flamed in her cheeks.

Tax Rates are Higher but Assessments Show Decline

New York—(P)—Tax rates on real property are going up, but assessed valuations are moving downward in American cities, the National Municipal league reported today, after a survey of 270 municipalities.

The survey showed Fort Smith, Ark., residents in 1939 paid the lowest adjusted real property rate in the nation—$10.58 per $1,000 of valuation.

Atlantic City, N. J., was highest with an adjusted rate of $63.93. In a similar survey last year, Atlantic City also was highest, with Wheeling, W. Va., the lowest. Conducted by Rosina Mohaupt of the Detroit Bureau of Municipal Research, Inc., the survey disclosed that during the last six years assessed values decreased 8.4 per cent while the average rate increased $2.61.

The average 1939 tax rate for the city property owner increased 45 cents per $1,000, over the 1938 rate while the average assessed value dropped 0.5 per cent.

"Under existing economic conditions," Miss Mohaupt concluded, "the American public either cannot pay high taxes on income-producing property or refuses to do so on non-income producing property." The survey found an indication that "the general property tax is perhaps reaching its maximum productivity" and pointed to "a decreasing burden on general property taxes in favor of other revenues, especially subsidies and grants from superior units of government."

"Whether this will be the new phase of municipal finance and what its effects will be on local budget practices and upon local government, can only be speculated upon at this time."

Bright Colors, Variety, New Ideas Show in Yule Season Displays of Greeting Cards

BY NELL CHAMBERLAIN

Just look at that line! As solid as a rock, no "give" at all. Surely there must be one weak spot, one place where a clever person could worm through. Look, look! There's an opening! Now to make a rush for it. Steady, get set, go! Oh, oh! Too late. They're closing in!

Once more the line around the Christmas card counter is as firm and solid as a rock. Guess I'll just have to be content to get up on my toes and peek over the shoulders of the crowd.

Did you ever see so many cards with candles and bells as this year? And the colors—splashes of reds and greens, with lots of deep blues and great gobs of silver and gold. Those Mexican cards which came out last year seem to be getting a big play this year. Donkeys and cactus and peons with bright scarves leave no doubt as to their Mexican origin. And as usual the humorous cards are going fast. There's a clever one, rough brown paper all folded up to disguise the fact that it you hold one end of it, the whole thing flaps open and hangs down about a yard, big letters spelling out "Merry Christmas."

What fun to get a card like this one! A big envelope contains a smaller one which contains a smaller one, which—etc. By the time you get down to the card, you practically have to use a microscope to read what it says.

Wife, Husband Cards

Surely there is romance left in marriage, if the number of wife and husband cards sold is any indication. Just look at the people around that section! And the sweetest cards are going like hot cakes, too.

Some people put as much into a Christmas card as others do into a gift. Those beribboned and spangled cards are luscious looking, and the hand painted ones could be framed after Christmas. Etchings make very swank cards, and the hand torn edges on these over here give them a very expensive look, but they're not really. Those hand tinted snow scenes seem to have caught on, too. Wonder if there'll be any left for me when I finally get to the counter.

Here's something new, at least to me. "Homespun" cards, they're called, and they come in early American design. The block prints on hand-drawn paper are selling fast, I notice.

Everything seems to be selling fast, and here I am no nearer the counter than before. O, lady! Please don't buy that card with the three little angels marching across it. Their stiff little wings and their very proper halos poised above their demure downcast eyes have captured my heart and I must have them. Oh, well, if you feel that way about it, go ahead. There's another one I can get, maybe. It's got silver stars all over a black background with a bright red border around the whole thing. And this cross-stitch design is awfully clever, too. Hey! Wait! Oh, well, there they go!

Greetings in Tweed

Now there's a card that I'd certainly have to have. If I were a man, it shows just a tweed shoulder with a corner of an initialed handkerchief peeking out of the breast pocket, the whole thing done in tan and brown. And that one showing an ash tray with a lighted cigarette burning is another "manly" card. And that black musical note wearing a top hat and dancing on a musical staff!

It's nice to know that some people still remember that Christmas is a religious holiday. Those Madonna cards are selling fast, and the Three Kings and Star in the East motif is popular, also the Nativity scene. Church steeples, fireplace scenes and sleighing and winter sports catch the fancy of a good many Christmas card shoppers.

What's that I see those people buying over there? Holiday note paper? The saleslady says many people like to write their own personal messages to their friends on note paper with a sprig of holly or a Christmas candle up in one corner. Now that sounds like a good idea for killing two birds with one stone. I can answer some of those letters that have been piling up in my desk and at the same time send off a Christmas greeting.

Wait a minute! Do my eyes deceive me, or is the crowd thinning out? Maybe I'll get up to the counter yet. Yes, there is definitely a large open space right in front of me. I can actually reach out and touch the cards. What's that? The bell? What bell? Oh! It's closing time! Well, couldn't you just put a pillow down here on the floor and let me stay here tonight? I'm going to be the first one here tomorrow morning if I have to pitch a tent!

Nazi Battleship May be Interned In Uruguay Port

than 2,500 men were engaged in the battle. The Ajax and Achilles each had crews of 550.

Up to 7:50 a. m. today (3:20 a. m., C.S.T.) the commander of the Admiral Graf Spee had not asked the Uruguayan government for an extension of the 24-hour time limit which, under international law, the battleship would have before being required to put out to sea—unless she applied for time to make repairs.

To informed persons it appeared that more than 30 days would be needed to repair the Admiral Graf Spee. These sources expressed the opinion Uruguay would not be willing to make an extension.

Must Ask Extension Uruguay neutrality regulations limit the visits of belligerent warships to 24 hours. Should their commanders then desire to remain longer to make essential repairs because of unseaworthiness, they must apply for an extension of time. In the past such extensions have been granted.

Uncertainty over the whereabouts of the cruiser Exeter was dispelled today when the warship nosed into the Rio de la Plata to a position 12 miles from Montevideo and the anchorage of the German battleship which knocked her out of yesterday's battle.

Apparently the Exeter, 1,500 miles from her Falkland island base, was seeking to make emergency repairs here. Officials from the British legation boarded her from a tug to survey her damage and gain a first-hand account of the battle.

The three cruisers which conquered the Admiral Graf Spee represented 22,405 tons of speedier naval power against the larger guns of the 10,000-ton pocket battleship.

Constant Firing The 7,030-ton Achilles and the 6,985-ton Ajax hounded the Admiral Graf Spee for the entire 14 hours—from 6 a. m. (3:30 a. m., C.S.T.) until after 8 p. m.—the six-inch guns almost constantly ablaze.

Uruguayan officials who boarded the Admiral Graf Spee said the Germans reported one of their direct hits destroyed a turret of the Exeter almost at the start of the battle.

German officers described how other shells struck the cruiser but apparently failed to penetrate her vital parts for the Exeter continued for some time in battle.

Shortly after midnight the German minister to Uruguay, Otto Langmann, and his staff went aboard the Admiral Graf Spee to check the damage and casualties.

Identifies Warship It was the envoy who made the first official announcement of the warship's identity. This was a surprise for there had been no hint that the Admiral Graf Spee had joined her sister ships, the Deutschland and Admiral Scheer in Atlantic raiding.

The Admiral Graf Spee had not been mentioned in European war reports since the British-German dispute over whether she had been hit in the British air raid on German ships in the Kiel base, Sept. 4, the second day of the war.

The German minister said the Admiral Graf Spee's commander was among those injured but that his condition was not serious. The damage to the battleship was such as to forbid her sailing within 24 hours unless she chose to fall easy prey to her waiting British foe. Under international law the battleship was privileged to lay up for repairs but must leave the neutral port within 24 hours after they are completed—or be interned.

Change Gas Used The German minister said a number of the wounded men complained that their sight had been affected by gas bombs they said were hurled from the British cruisers.

The engagement—the greatest naval encounter of the war thus far—concluded within the American neutrality belt and much of it could be seen from the Uruguayan shore. Observers and radio stations gave Uruguayans a virtual round-by-round account of daylight portions of the fight.

The Admiral Graf Spee came upon the cruiser Ajax just after dawn yesterday. The British warship was conveying the French merchantman Formosa from Brazil to Uruguay.

The German vessel rushed into battle, her heavy guns blazing. The French freighter slipped away to safety. The Ajax returned the German fire with her six-inch guns, momentarily repulsing the attacks and at the same time summoning the Achilles and Exeter.

Finds Tables Turned Quickly the Germans found the tables turned with their 26-knot battleship harassed by three faster but lighter-armed British ships. The Ajax and Achilles made 32.5 knots, the Exeter 32.

The Admiral Graf Spee apparently found the Exeter's eight-inch guns particularly damaging for she turned her back on her other attackers to concentrate volleys after volleys on the Exeter, heaviest of the British men-of-war.

This concentration of fire put the Exeter out of the battle after two hours, her armor—from two to three inches thick—battered by the German shells. But the diversion benefitted the two other British ships.

The six-inch guns of the Achilles and Ajax were more than a match for the 11-inch weapons of the Admiral Graf Spee and she squirmed to escape. Observers at Punta del Este lighthouse on the Uruguayan shore saw the pocket battleship steam away to the southwest but the Achilles and Ajax were at her heels, relentlessly firing.

Black smoke from the funnels of the maneuvering ships streaked the horizon and the rumble of guns reached the shore as pursued and pursuers circled in a grim game of hide and hideouts.

The two British cruisers pursued their quarry to Montevideo harbor after night had fallen. The gunfire that had reverberated up and down the coast, sometimes barely nine miles off shore, continued for some time after dark.

Her identity hidden by the night, the Admiral Graf Spee crept into the harbor, guided by her anchorage by a Montevideo port pilot taken aboard by the German warship's launch.

Commodore H. H. Harwood of the Exeter, was named by the British legation as the victorious commander.

The battle occurred 25 years to the month after the British Admiral Sir Doveton Sturdee caught German Admiral von Spee's two armored cruisers, three light cruisers and three supply ships off the Falkland islands, near the southern tip of Argentina.

All but one of the German ships were sent to the bottom. That was on Dec. 8, 1914, and the victory gave Britain undisputed command of main ocean routes for the rest of the World War. Yesterday, in another war, it was the battleship namesake of Admiral von Spee which was beaten.

GERMAN REPORT Berlin—The German high command asserted today that the German pocket battleship Graf Spee was sinking the British merchantman Tauxo, a 7,000-ton ship, when she was encountered by three British cruisers in the south Atlantic yesterday.

Authorized sources at the same time vigorously denied that the Graf Spee would be interned in Montevideo, where it went after being damaged in the sea battle.

These sources said the ship went to Montevideo merely to bury 36 dead seamen and to provide hospital treatment for gassed and wounded men and replenish victuals damaged by mustard gas which the British were accused of using.

Soviet Ambassador Is No Help In Making U. S. Feel Neutral

BY WESTBROOK PEGLER

Washington—The dignity of the Union of Soviet Socialist Republics is personified in the United States by Constantine Umansky, a former journalist propagandist and press censor and occasional interpreter for Josef Stalin. He is small and may be described as prepossessing only at a ruthless sacrifice of candor. For contrast he may be compared to Hjalmar Procope, the Finnish minister—a tall, handsome man of around 40 years, with a brave, manly bearing and a following in Washington which amounts to a menace to American neutrality on the present stage of the second world war, they personify their respective countries so accurately.

Mr. Umansky's personality is not endearing, and his reputation has been heightened not only by the memoirs of those who knew him as a pushful, opportunist clerk in Moscow when he was working his way through the government bureaus but also by events parallel to his services here. The mere sight or mention of his excellency—a title which suggests more of sarcasm than of ceremony—stirs recollection of his former chief and predecessor, Alexander Troyanovsky, once an officer in the Czar's cavalry.

Troyanovsky was recalled to Russia, and, although he has not yet been shot, his status apparently amounts to open arrest. Doubtless Umansky himself will be yanked back one day and, not unthinkably, stood against a wall, like so many of his late colleagues in the service of the new czar. To say that such a routine move in the Moscow foreign office would wet a single eye in Washington, Moscow or anywhere else would be to venture into prophecy and irresponsible opinion. It is much less chancy, however, to predict that he, in his turn, will be recalled, undone by the spying and whispering of confidants in his own household in the big, rich embassy behind the red curtains, for that is the tradition of the corps which he adorns.

As for Troyanovsky, though he did have charm and something which, for lack of a more precise word, may be set down as decency, it can only be said that this removal and such further reverses as may have befallen him in Moscow serve him damn well right. A man of his intelligence and advantages must have known that he was slumming and that he must expect treachery.

Good Manners are Deviation from Party Lines He once appeared at a formal dinner in white tie and tails, while Comrade Earl Browder, seated down the board, wore a common business suit and bounced out before the meal was over in exasperation over remarks flung at him by Norman Thomas, one of their removed. Comrade Browder's attitude and conduct that evening seemed ominous for Comrade Troyanovsky. Good manners are a serious deviation from the party line, and Troyanovsky not only behaved acceptably in Washington but gave scandal by associating with the bourgeoisie in the little resort town of Sarasota, Fla. in winter.

The Soviet ambassador should not make a mug of the first comrade of the American branch of the conspiracy, but no doubt Troyanovsky did find unbearable the company of his comrades in the U. S. A. and crossed the line in sheer desperation. Indeed, most of them do break out whenever other people will have them.

There are Other Fields Involving Fatal Error Comrade Umansky runs less risk of deviation in the same manner, but there are other fields in which

Others in Umansky's corps have been shot for fraternizing with the nazis, but now that Stalin fraternizes with them a race-wrong diplomat might be picked for liquidation as a gesture of solidarity with Berlin.

Irresistibly the thought of his excellency Umansky and Dr. Procope of Finland conjures the spectacle of Umansky's country assaulting Procope's. And this, in turn, suggests a mental picture of a more intimate conflict—a personal one between Umansky and the manly, honest, clean-scrubbed Finn. That is a beautiful picture, suitable for framing.

Actress Fay Wray of the movies is shown in court in Los Angeles where she went to seek a divorce from John Monk Sammers, author and scenarist, on her testimony that he complained marriage was "too restricting" and "constantly asked me to divorce him" besides having threatened her with bodily injury. She won custody of their son, Gary, 3.

one may be guilty of grave—indeed, even fatal—error in the Soviet foreign service. High School Cage Squad Drills for Conference Game

Kaukauna—Coach Guy Krumm's high school cagers went through a long offensive drill last night in preparation for Friday night's battle here against West DePere in the first home conference game. In the only other home game the Kaws dropped a 25 to 21 decision to East Green Bay.

Krumm has laid stress this week on improving the squad's shooting, which was very poor off against Neenah. The visitors have lost their only conference start, 17 to 9, at Shawano, and have dropped four of six games to Kaukauna in the last three years.

Regulars to Start
Krumm will start Bill Alger at center, Joe Bloch and Don Bisel at forward and Karl Giordana and Junior Swedberg at guard. If the Kaws can start to click Krumm will show his most promising reserves, Bill Tassin, Earl Van Dyke, Willis Rangoette and Eldor Stanelle. Against Neenah Krumm played on by his five regulars, and against Green Bay only six men.

Bill Alger, the squad's high point man who failed to score against Neenah, appears to have regained his shooting eye this week. Alger, a junior, has made rapid strides as a defensive player also, and seems destined to take his place among the best cagers Kaukauna High school has seen.

The B teams of the two schools will meet in a 7 o'clock preliminary, with the main game at 8 o'clock. The B team has won one of five contests, defeating Clintonville.

League of Nations Council Ousts Soviet Union Because Of Her Invasion of Finland

the action of the U. S. S. R. against the Finnish state, and,
"Second, for reasons set forth in the resolution of the assembly by virtue of Article 16, Paragraph 4, of the covenant.

"Finds that by its act the U. S. S. R. has placed itself outside the League of Nations.

"It follows that the U. S. S. R. no longer is a member of the league."

Of the 39 states present at the assembly, 9 abstained from voting on the resolution condemning Russia as an aggressor and asking members to aid Finland.

They were the three Scandinavian countries, Norway, Sweden and Denmark; three Baltic countries, Lithuania, Latvia and Estonia; Switzerland, China and Bulgaria.

A move to expel Russia from the league automatically goes to the league council.

Mexico first had been listed among the members in the voting. The Mexican delegate said, however, that he had cast a ballot, but that if he had been in the council voting on the ouster move he would have been forced to abstain.

Finland's delegate, the white-haired Rudolf Holsti, walked to the tribune amid loud applause to express the Finnish people's "profound gratitude."

Hopes for Help
He said the amount of practical aid which Finland would get from the assembly's action depended upon the capacity of the league's coordinating staff and the cooperation of the civilized world with that staff.

Before the assembly vote, Great Britain informed the league that she already was "taking steps to enable the Finnish government to obtain the material required for their defenses in England."

R. A. Butler, undersecretary for foreign affairs said, "the assembly (of the league) may rest assured that despite the heavy burden which we in the United Kingdom, in common with other nations of the British commonwealth, and our allies, are bearing at the present time in the major struggle for right and law in which we are engaged, we hereby excuse ourselves from giving the best assistance in their power to Finland."

See Volunteers
High diplomatic quarters suggested that foreign troops idling in allied armies might become fighting volunteers for the Finns.

The idea of an international brigade for Finland, similar to that which Moscow supported in republican Spain, began to leak out of league corridor conversations.

France would be the main source of such volunteers, as she is host to Polish and Czech units and many other foreign fighting men in addition to her own Foreign Legion.

Military sources said they were eager to find a wide open battleground in their war with Germany, and that the Baltic states and western Russia might be viewed in Paris and London as the longest but easiest way around Germany's Siegfried line.

French Delegate Joseph Paul-Boncour frequently has emphasized his belief that practical aid to the Finns is far more urgent than ousting Russia from the league.

Egypt and China were elected members of the new council by 37 votes and 34 votes, respectively.

Karl J. Hambro of Norway, president, closed the assembly at 4 p. m. (9 a. m., C.S.T.) for an "indefinite suspension" after a brief speech.

whether the labor board could "refuse" to determine collective bargaining units in cases where employers may have delegated their bargaining powers to an employer association. The committee heard testimony yesterday that the board had refused to recognize individual bargaining units in the coal industry where state-wide associations of employers existed.

Prior to the exchange between Murdock and Toland, the committee spread on its record a telegram from New York signed "Mon. 12/14/39, 444 Twentieth street," and saying, "Protect your un-American, cowardly procedure."

Wants 5-Man Board
It was addressed to Chairman Smith (D-Va.).

"I am advised," said Toland, "that the individual who signed the telegram is an official of the American Newspaper Guild, affiliated with the Congress of Industrial Organizations."

Joe Ozanic, president of the Progressive Mine Workers' union (AFL), concluding a day and a half of testimony, proposed that congress replace the present three-man labor board with a five-man board so that "in case one or two members are biased or prejudiced they wouldn't be in a majority."

Mercury Skids to 14 Degrees Today

Fair, Somewhat Warmer Forecast for Tonight And Friday

A touch of winter sent temperatures to the lowest point of the season this morning and brought forth the philosophical general comment that "It couldn't last." Referring, of course, to the unusually mild weather and extended fall season.

Foiled by the unseasonal weather, the cold snap caught many motorists unawares and frozen automobile radiators were not an uncommon sight this morning.

Mercury in the thermometer on the roof of the Post-Crescent building edged its way up to 27 degrees this afternoon as a bright sun tried its best to dispel the frosty temperatures. Highest and lowest marks during the 24-hour period preceding 9 o'clock this morning were 31 degrees at 11 o'clock yesterday morning and 14 degrees at 7 o'clock this morning, according to records at the power plant of the Wisconsin Michigan Power company.

Fair and somewhat warmer weather is predicted for tonight and Friday.

Maximum and minimum temperatures in the nation as reported at official weather bureau stations were 80 degrees at Los Angeles, Calif., and 6 degrees at Wausau and Park Falls, Wis., and Sault Ste. Marie, Mich., according to the Associated Press.

Good Fellows Bring Christmas Happiness to Needy Families

If you are skeptical about the harsh circumstances in which some Appleton families are living, a consultation with officials of the city relief department will erase this skepticism.

It is families like the one which will be subsequently described that the Good Fellows are out to help during the Christmas season, when all people need more than the bare necessities to make them happy participants of the celebration.

The relief department has many families on its files who can't possibly afford to buy their children Christmas candies, toys and other things that all youngsters should enjoy at this season of year.

In one family, for example, there are 11 children living with the parents in a 5-room, 1-story house which the relief department has rented.

Thirteen people gather at the table at meal time. The father has no cash income. He earns about $16 a week, but receives credit on food purchases the relief department must make for his family.

Thus, there is no cash coming into the home whatever. It is obvious that with an earning power of only $16 a week, the father can't possibly provide his 11 children with the kind of a Christmas they deserve.

The Good Fellows can and will. Working through the Relief and Welfare council, they know this family's needs and with the contributions they receive will make up a Christmas basket that will bring joy and happiness into this household.

There are no hit-and-miss methods in the Good Fellows organization. Careful investigations are made of each particular family in need of help—and their needs are considered in making up the baskets they will receive.

The number of Good Fellows in Appleton grows each day, but the roster can never be too long.

Honor Roll of

Contributions to the Good Fellows fund slowed down today. The total at noon was only $63.50. At least $700 is required to provide baskets for those who need them most. Here is the list of Good Fellow contributors up to date:

Democratic Group Meets Demands of Liberals--Curry

Milwaukee County Chairman Speaks at Outagamie Meeting

The Democratic Party Organization of Wisconsin is composed of party rebels, but it is answering the demands of true liberals in the state, Edward P. Curry, Milwaukee, county Democratic chairman said in a talk at a dinner meeting of Outagamie county Democrats last night at Hotel Appleton.

About 100 persons from Outagamie, Brown, Waupaca, Shawano and Winnebago counties attended the meeting at which Gustave J. Keller, county chairman and president of the liberal group, presided.

Curry denied rumors that he was at differences with the organization or its executive board. Discussing the growth of the organization, he said that it has spread to more than 50 counties in the state.

"It is the only active organization of its kind in the state, the people run it and there are no strings or bonds. The organization does not claim to deliver votes; it guarantees each county unit to run its own county and each district to run its own district. The organization will carry out the wishes of the rank and file of its membership."

Curry said that men in "official control of the Democratic party in the state have, without party members having a voice in it, promised to a certain group of delegates to back certain candidates for the Democratic nomination for president. He challenged these men to show what they have done for the party in the state in the last seven years and blamed them for the development of the coalition.

No 3rd Party Need
The Milwaukee county Democratic leader said there is no need for a third party, that a 2-party system is more efficient because issues are made more clear to the people. If the founders of the third party are sincere, they will join the Democratic Party Organization of Wisconsin because it has answered many demands of the true liberal of the state, he said.

Discussing the Democratic party's probable strength in 1940, Curry said there is a "splendid chance" of success because the third party has split and because of the Republican record, which, he said, speaks for itself.

Delegates to the district and state conferences will be elected by the membership of the Democratic Party Organization of Wisconsin. Keller declared in stating that Democrats of the state are disgusted with hand-picked groups who in the past have chosen delegates and delegate groups. Delegates, he continued, will have direct instructions and will be pledged.

For Roosevelt
The organization will continue to be for Roosevelt for a third term.

unless Roosevelt announces he will not seek the office, Keller said. Referring to the state program Keller said the organization is not interested in "name" candidates but in a constructive platform. Toward this end the organization is conducting schools and offering courses in political science.

Dr. C. L. Newberry, Milwaukee, one of the instructors of such a school being held in Milwaukee county, discussed the program. He said the course consists of two parts: public speaking and parliamentary law.

Speaking of the action of the liberal group in supporting Roosevelt, Dr. Newberry said that political wisdom dictates the course of action. No other man in the country is versed well enough in the things that are meeting with some success to replace Roosevelt, he said.

Leo Schmalz, Kaukauna, secretary of the county Democrats, said that activities in the county will be started with the new year. Groups will be formed in every village and town, he said, and a school on political science will be held.

Grace Bonini, county women's leader, also spoke.

Corps of Workers Is Organized to Prepare Baskets

About 110 Will Be Distributed as New London Yule Project

New London — A complete corps of workers to prepare and distribute Christmas baskets was arranged by committee chairmen of the Associated Charities at a meeting at Washington high school Tuesday night.

Because investigation revealed that many families who have received baskets the last several years have enjoyed the benefits of steady employment this fall, the number of recipients was cut down from 152 of last year to 101 this year. It is expected that other needy families may yet be added to the list, bringing the total number of baskets this year to about 110. Fewer baskets may mean better gifts for the children.

Selecting of gifts, purchasing of foodstuffs and collection of jells, jams and toys will be rushed to have the baskets ready for distribution on Friday, Dec. 22. Jells, jams and canned goods will be collected through the school children as in past years.

Assisting in Work — The workers this year are as follows: Jells, jams and canned goods, Miss Mable Nock, chairman, Isaac LeBeau, John Rickaby, Larry Yost, John Kopitzke, Anton J. Herres, Ed Popke, pick-up, P. J. Dernbach, chairman, Mrs. Earl Meiklejohn, candy and peanuts, Mrs. John San-

Vikes, Cornell Clash Tonight in Midwest Contest

Ken Buesing Expected to Start at Guard With Jarvis Lingle

MIDWEST CONFERENCE THE WEEK'S GAMES
Thursday Night
Lawrence at Cornell.
Friday Night
Beloit at Knox.
Lawrence at Grinnell.
Saturday Night
Beloit at Monmouth.
Grinnell at Coe.
Lawrence at Loras (Dubuque, Ia.).

LAWRENCE college basketball squad left here yesterday afternoon for Iowa and tonight will meet Cornell college five at Mt. Vernon. It will be Lawrence's second game of the Midwest schedule. Reports are Cornell has one of the strongest teams in several years and is definitely pointed for the Midwest title.

Friday night the Vikings move up to Grinnell, Ia., for their first cage game with the K. Buesing newest addition to the conference. Grinnell also is said to have a strong team.

Both schools have comparatively small floors with the crowd sitting almost on the court and Coach Art Denney feels the change may bother his charges. During the week Denney has worked the men on a zone defense in the expectation it will be the best to use. He also has had to alter his offense to fit expected requirements.

Indications are Denney will make only one change in last week's starting lineup using Ken Buesing at guard and keeping Bill Masterson for a replacement at guard or forward.

In that event, Buesing and Jarvis Lingle will start at guards, Denney being especially pleased with Lingle's work last Saturday against Knox. Art Schade will work at center with Herb Kirchhoff replacing him at regular intervals. Schade is good until the pace tires him and then he must be replaced immediately. The forwards will be Don Fredrickson and Wallie Cape. Both looked good last week but Denney feels Fredrickson will be even better as the season goes along.

Others who made the trip were Bob Smith, guard, Frank Nencki, forward, and Joe Morton, forward.

UCLA Back Best Ground Gainer

But the Race Is So Close There'll Probably Be Recount

Seattle —(P)—It's so close there probably will be a recount, but Kenny Washington, the great Negro back from the University of California at Los Angeles, ranks today as the nation's leading gridiron ground gainer of 1939.

Washington's sterling performance against Southern California last week sent him from third to first place just a scant nine yards ahead of Tom Harmon of Michigan, who in turn was just 14 yards ahead of Kay Eakin of Arkansas.

The blanket finish meant a thorough recount, the American Football Statistical Bureau, which compiled the figures, announced. The re-check will be made before the bureau announces its final, official figures.

Here are the figures for total offense—gains from both rushes and passes—of the three leaders:

Washington—In 10 games he carried the ball 170 times, passed 90 times for a total of 260 yards; he gained 228 yards rushing and 537 passing for a total of 1,365 yards.

Harmon—In eight games he carried the ball 129 times, passed 94 times for a total of 223 yards; he gained 888 yards rushing and 488 passing for a total of 1,376 yards.

Eakin—In 10 games he carried the ball 119 times and passed 193 times

Marquette Tackle May Join Chicago Cardinals

BY EDDIE BRIETZ
NEW YORK —(P)—Jack Dempsey and Jimmy Johnson may team up and promote a Red Burman-Bob Pastor fight in Miami in February. The Babe Dahlgren club of Waterbury, Conn., will petition the Yanks to keep Babe on first and may picket the stadium if they don't. Ray Buser, Marquette tackle, wasn't tabbed in the pro league draft, but he had three offers since and probably will take the one from the Chicago Cardinals.

BY HAROLD CLAASSEN
COLUMBIA, MO.—(P)—Sons of a Methodist Bishop, the four Waldorfs of gridiron fame not only look alike—they play alike.

The collegiate career of the four-some ends New Year's day with Robert and his University of Missouri teammates competing in the Orange bowl at Miami against Georgia Tech.

Brother Lynn was a second all-America tackle choice at Syracuse in 1925, brother John won all-conference honors at Missouri and brother Paul twice was an all-Kansas back at Baker university.

Quiet and affable, Robert virtually was a unanimous selection as right guard on the 1939 Big Six all star team.

Next season he hopes to coach. He has been a student grader for professor-coach Don Faurot's "major sports" classes.

Except for the difference in poundage of the elder brothers, the four are as similar as the sides of a square box.

First came Lynn. He thought first he wanted to follow his father's ministerial footsteps but attended Syracuse, majoring in physiology, and wound up as a gridiron revivalist at Northwestern.

After graduation from Missouri, John became a gentleman farmer and Big Six official. Paul was a member of a Baker university backfield that went 21 games without defeat. He's now coach at Fort Hays State, Kas.

Clintonville Will Entertain Indians

Clintonville—Stiff workouts have been on tap all week for the Clintonville high cage team preparing for the Shawano Indians who are invading the local gym Friday evening.

Both squads were defeated in last week's conference play. Menasha edged out the Indians while New London was handing the Clints a terrific drubbing.

New London was in the drivers seat all the way and with a short passing attack and aggressiveness had things its own way. Clintonville looked good at times and had it not been for a lot of tough luck with shots rolling around the rim and falling off, the scoreboard might not have shown what a gap.

Several times in the fourth quarter the Clints set up plays and had the boys been able to complete them they would have provided plenty of opposition for the New Londoners.

The Shawano five will come to Clintonville with everything in its favor. Last year the Indians shared the conference laurels with Neenah and according to pre-season information, again is tops. Shawano usually manages to get all its bad shots and tough breaks in one game and last Friday seemed to be the day. Coach Cliff Dills' boys are gunning for another conference crown and aren't taking any chances of letting up.

Coach Swede Johnson again is stressing ball handling which was weak last Friday. The boys quarrel hang onto the ball and fumbles were frequent with New London usually coming up with the sphere. The second squad also is being sent through its paces this week after having come out of last week's battle with an 18 to 17 victory. Inasmuch as the record of the second team is bleak kept, the Jayvees hope to have at least one Clintonville team in a pennant race.

Chicago-Purdue Grid Game Goes to Latter
LaFayette, Ind.—(P)—Purdue University's 1940 football game with the University of Chicago has been transferred from Chicago to LaFayette, Athletic Director Nobel E. Kizer announced. The game will be Oct. 19.

The Boilermakers will play three other home games next fall—against Butler, Sept. 28; Wisconsin, Oct. 26; and Indiana, Nov. 25. Road games include Michigan State, Oct. 12; Iowa, Nov. 2; Fordham, Nov. 8; and Minnesota, Nov. 18.

U. W. CAGE BRIEFS

Gene England of Kenosha rates the number one pivot job so far. He is one of the scrappiest men on the squad and has the ability to "fine" the other squad members. His height makes him a good rebound man and his scoring is slowly improving. However, this is still the weakest point of his game.

Chaff'n Chatter

By Gordon R. McIntyre

A FEW NIGHTS AGO we attended a meeting at McKinley school which had for its purpose, organization of the South Side Athletic club. The group would like to help youngsters in the 13th and 14th wards—the old Fourth ward to you—get athletic equipment and compete in various types of athletics.

Interest in the boys started this fall when Sacred Heart school had a football team directed by Ralph Barlet. At the end of the season the group helped arrange a dinner for the gridders. Now it plans to get basketball equipment for the boys, arrange to have hockey and ice sports and in the spring offer an opportunity to play baseball and softball.

It's a highly commendable project and one means of raising money is a dance scheduled for Friday night at Rainbow Gardens. Aside from that the membership fees and a card party or two will bring funds.

The efforts of the group, however, brings up the question of recreation—a year round recreation program for the city of Appleton administered through the schools and using school facilities. It's another indication that more and more people are becoming interested in the matter and that their efforts should be coordinated so that something really can be accomplished.

We couldn't pass up the opportunity to tell the south siders that we felt a recreation program would meet most of their needs, and that it would offer recreation for their boys, their girls and for themselves if properly directed.

We took the liberty to tell the group that the only way such a program was forthcoming was through a city ordinance and probably a referendum vote. We suggested that they send a representative to a meeting of the Civic Association which is interested in recreation, and reminded them that small recreation programs have been most successful in their section of the city and could be expanded to include more youngsters and also adults.

Doe Hegner had a face a mile long after Fond du Lac defeated Appleton High school basketball team the other evening. Doe's nephew was the elongated chap with the Irish monicker of O'Brien who played center for Fond du Lac. Doe made a remark about the outcome and the young fellow snapped him up and Doe is poorer as result.

R. J. "Eck" Erditz has relinquished his basketball coaching work at Oshkosh Vocational school but remains as an instructor. Eck's illness, subsequent operation and Mary Erditz' recent accident prompted his action.

Bill Chandler's daughter at Wisconsin is said to "scout" the Badger basketball team and furnishes her pop with information which in turn is relayed to Bill's Marquette squad. The daughter's name is Caryl and she's a great follower of the sport. Yes, she pulls for Marquette even if she is a Wisconsin student.

Brillion, Freedom, Hilbert, Hortonville, Seymour, Shiocton, Stockbridge, Winneconne and Wrightstown High schools will be eligible to compete in that Shiocton district basketball tournament next spring. Amherst, Bear Creek, Bonduel, Iola, Marion, Scandinavia and Weyauwega will compete in the Iola meet.

Tommy Burns, who used to call Kimberly home and who performed in amateur boxing circles hereabouts for a year or two, is visiting in the valley.

Sheboygan Redskins Lose to All-Americans
Indianapolis —(P)—The Kaustky All-Americans scored a 37 to 34 victory over the Sheboygan, Wis., Redskins in a National Professional basketball game here last night.

The Redskins trailed 26 to 13 at half time. A fourth quarter rally netted Sheboygan 16 points, but the rally fell short.

Sines paced the winners with 10 points, while Glen Adams and Ed Dancker scored seven apiece for Sheboygan.

Byron Nelson at Scene of Slump
Hopes for Comeback at Miami Open After Last Year's Fiasco

Miami, Fla., —(P)—Byron Nelson, national open champion, returned today to the scene of his worst golfing slump for a crack at the year's professional supremacy.

By winning the $10,000 Miami open, which begins today and extends through Sunday, Nelson could overtake Henry Picard and earn the Professional Golfers association's highest accolade, the Harry Vardon trophy. The 45 first place points in the year's final tournament would assure Nelson of the trophy since Picard now leads by only five points, 459 to 454.

A year ago Nelson was struggling in the depths of his greatest depression. Jangled nerves from the tournament strain had him so jittery that he failed to qualify for the last 36 holes of the Miami open.

"I couldn't hit the ground with my hat," he smiled today.

Against Picard and Nelson in the 72-hole Miami grind was one of the best golf fields ever assembled outside the national open.

Among the solid contenders was Ralph Guldahl two-time national open champion who could finish as the year's top money winner by taking the $2,500 first prize. Picard now leads with $10,202 to $9,377 for Guldahl, $8,600 for Dick Metz and $8,390 for Nelson.

Also in the mix are Metz, Guldahl, Jimmy Thomson and Harold (Jug) McSpaden were installed as co-favorites at 8 to 1.

McSpaden won the tournament last year with a 275, five under par, a stroke ahead of Picard.

Lou Ambers' Comeback Gets No. 1 Vote of the Writers

NEW YORK —(P)—After considerable wrangling in the ballot box, the sports experts of the nation decided today that Lou Ambers' punches landed just a little bit farther along the comeback trail in 1939 than old Lefty Mose Grove's "dead soup-bone."

Two-ton Tony Galento also figured in a three-cornered battle of votes in the Associated Press' ninth annual poll for the leading comebacker.

The writers were asked to name their choices for first, second and third places, with ballots counting three, two and one points respectively. On this basis, Ambers, who exploded the flistic theory that "they never come back" by regaining the world lightweight championship from Henry Armstrong, drew 18 nominations above the average.

Red Sox veteran came back to win 15 games, lost only four and turned in an earned average of less than three per nine-inning game. For this, the experts gave him a total of 50 points, with 10 picking him No. 1.

Nine of the experts selected Galento as No. 1 in a year which saw him skyrocket above the average, shake off pneumonia, actually fight heavyweight champion Joe Louis and then go on to his amazing knockout of Lou Nova. For this record, the barrel-shaped gent from Jersey received 43 points.

Don Meade, out of the saddle for nearly three years, came back to win the jockey championship hands down. Six of the balloters named him as the leading comebacker of '39, and all told, they awarded the South Dakota rider 29 points for fourth place.

As a sport, baseball led all the rest, with 23 nominations. Clint Brown, the Chicago White Sox ace relief pitcher, polled 12 points for seventh place to come closer to Grove in this department. Golf had 20 performers on the list, headed by Dick Metz with 10 points. Tennis had eight and boxing seven.

FRIDAY'S GAMES

Waupaca at Manawa.

Wega at Amherst.

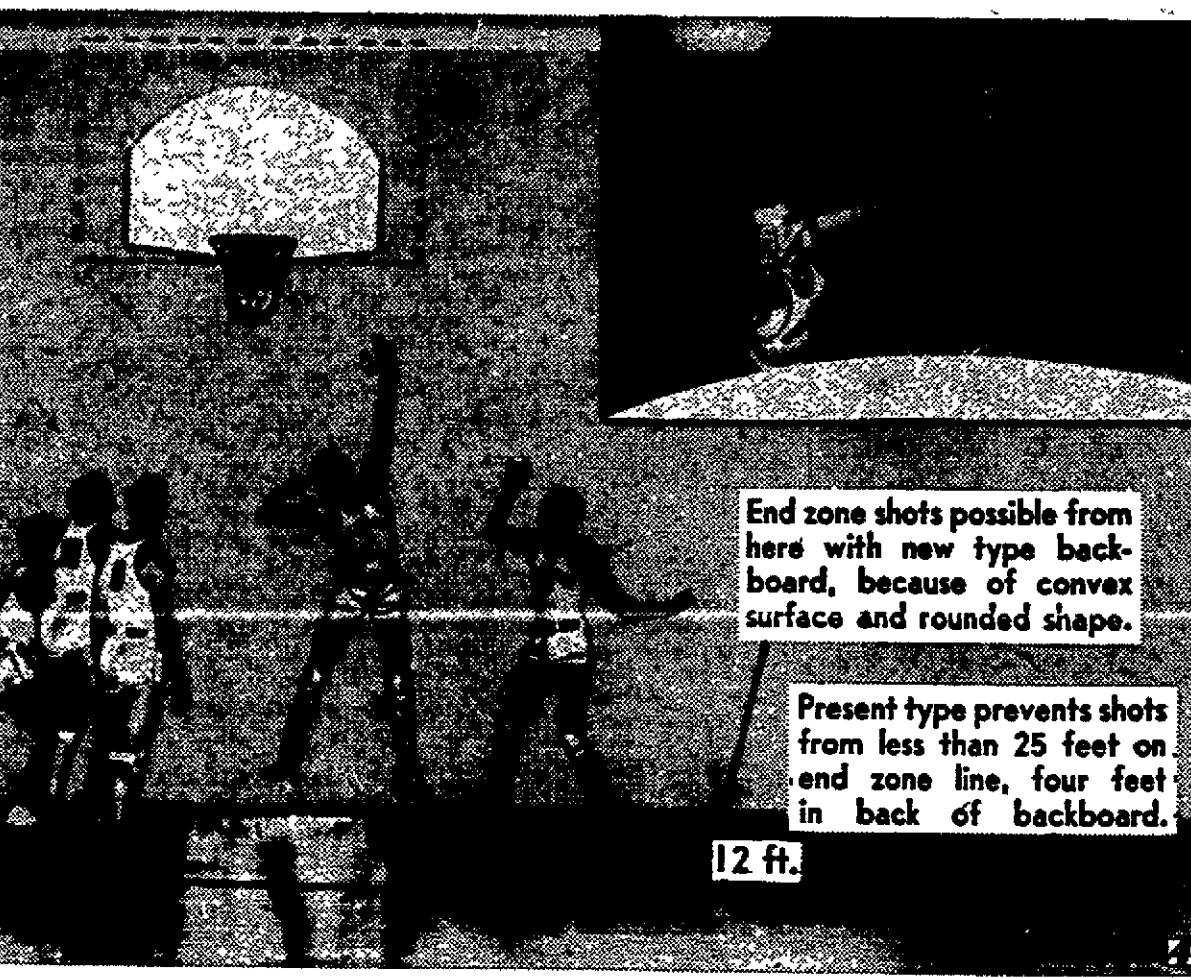

Marion at Iola.

Marion—The Marion Pigeons will travel to Iola Friday evening where they will engage in their second conference basketball game. Iola lost very few of its stars, so Marion can look for a strong team. Marion lost several of its good players through graduation last year but had the pick of last year's strong Bee team.

Last year Iola and the Pigeons broke even, each winning one game. The scores were Iola 29, Marion 21, and Iola 24, Marion 36.

Milwaukee—Milwaukee's first major basketball doubleheader will feature Marquette against Iowa and Wisconsin at the Milwaukee Auditorium, Saturday night, Dec. 30. A capacity crowd of 6,200 is expected. Prices are scaled from 65 cents to $2.20, with none at the latter rate available now.

Big 7 Champs Like New Backboard

End zone shots possible from here with new type backboard, because of convex surface and rounded shape.

Present type prevents shots from less than 25 feet on end zone line, four feet in back of backboard.

12 ft.

Biggest argument for the new backboard is the increased scoring zone as illustrated here.

BY ROBERT GEIGER
AP Feature Service Writer

BOULDER, Colo.—The new convex basketball backboard which grew out of a suggestion by the National Basketball committee gets a rousing vote of approval from Colorado University's defending Big Seven conference champions.

The curved board, says the committee, is necessary for the modern game. Coach Forrest Cox, a member of the national rules group offers these reasons:

It opens a wider area of the end zones for shooting; it increases possibilities for angle shooting; it gives the ball greater rebound, thus relieving under-the-basket congestion, and it makes the basket more visible to spectators.

Cox predicted the new board, or one similar to it, will be approved by the committee for use in the 1940-41 season.

At its 1939 meeting the committee agreed there was waste space on the traditional four feet by six feet backboard and that this waste was a detriment. It proposed experiments be made to determine the best type of board.

Much Less Surface

Cox installed two auxiliary convex boards, with curved sides and top, at Colorado University. The boards have approximately 300 square inches less surface than the 4x6 boards.

Cox used them at coaching schools this year at Boulder and at Utah State. The class in Utah voted 50 to 3 for them and at Boulder 17 to 7.

"Combined with the rule allowing the extension of the end zones to four feet behind the board, instead of two feet, the new convex, rounded board makes it possible to score a basket from about 12 feet to either side of the board," says Cox.

"With the square board it is barely possible to shoot at the basket on the end zone line, from about 25 feet to either side, or at about the side line.

"For bank shots from in front of the backboard, this new board increases the scoring zone by 720 square feet, figuring the ball contacts the board three inches inside the edge."

"The visibility for spectators is increased because of the elimination of the unused area."

Besides having rounded corners and being convex, the new board differs from the old one in method of mounting. The basket on the board is almost at the extreme bottom, instead of 12 inches up from the bottom. The new basket at Colorado University is mounted much more rigidly on the backboard than are the older types and the board itself is much more rigid.

"It is necessary to alter your shooting technique on this new board but you soon get used to it," says Jack Harvey, all-conference center and sharpshooter. "It's a big improvement over the old board."

The new board has been installed at several other universities throughout the nation. It won't be used for any Big Seven conference games this year but Coach Cox said it will be used in non-conference games if both teams agree.

The "visiblity for spectators is increased because of the elimination of the unused area."

Fourteen Attend Ski Club Meeting at Y

Fourteen persons attended last night's meeting of Appleton Ski club at the Y. M. C. A. Ed Swammer, vice president, presided in the absence of the president. The Cloud Busters reported they had secured two new associate members in the membership drive. A visitor at last night's meeting indicated he would join next week. The group planned for a Christmas party.

Hammann while the game is in progress.

Kimberly won its opening Little Nine conference game by taking Hilbert into camp. Seymour lost to Brillion. The loss gives Seymour the desire to turn the tables on Hammann's squad and it is being keyed up to do just that.

The visitors have a formidable squad in Pasch, Adamski, Fischer, Gavronski and Huettl. This combination won five non-conference games before being stopped by Brillion. The Papermakers have started slowly losing three non-conference games while mastering a new play set up.

The Papermakers will show a starting lineup of Williams, F. Vander Velden, C. Gaffney, J. Van Cuyk and P. Smith. The B squads of the two schools will show in the preliminary game starting at 7:15. The high school band, with Gordon Kotkosky directing, will play for the occasion.

The Badgers, victors over Marquette, 46 to 39, lost to Notre Dame, 41 to 33, Tuesday night.

Seeking to regain their early season scoring eye and floorwork, the squad reviewed its plays for more than two hours yesterday, and planned similar workouts for today and Friday.

Davey O'Brien, the quarterback signed with the Philadelphia Eagles and set a new league record of 21 completed passes in a single game.

Parker Hall established a new passing record while playing for the Cleveland Rams. He completed 108 during the season.

Catholic Conference Teams to Clash at Little Chute Friday Night

Little Chute — St. Joseph High school cagers of Keshena will invade the St. John gym Friday evening in a Catholic conference game. St. Joseph has a well balanced club but recently lost to a crack St. Mary's team of Menasha by a 39 to 13 score.

St. John lost to St. Mary's Tuesday evening, 33 to 21, so the locals are favored over the Keshena squad by a small margin. This is the first season in the Catholic conference for St. Joseph.

Three games will be played, giving the local fans plenty of action. The local Junior Holy Name team will be host to Chilton St. Mary graders at 6 o'clock. At 7 o'clock a recently formed team under the name of Koehn Theater will clash with the Kaukauna C.Y.O. team.

The Theater lineup includes a number of former High Dutchmen, including Roger Koehn, Red Boots, Heesakker, Hank Van Lankfelt and others.

At 8 o'clock St. Joseph will tangle with the local high school varsity. Outstanding for the visitors are Beauprey, forward, and O'Connors, center, who showed class against St. Mary, Beauprey scoring four field goals for eight out of thirteen points.

Dalles Frantz has appeared with almost every leading symphony orchestra and conductor in the United States and Canada, including Stokowski, but is now to share his concert work with a screen career, playing his first important role in "Balalaika," a musical co-starring Nelson Eddy and Ilona Massey.

Hollywood — Hollywood's talent brigade might well be compared to a football team. We have our flashy, spectacular open field runners in stars like Bette Davis and Mickey Rooney; our dependable line-men in character actors like Jean Hersholt, Tom Mitchell and Gale Sondergaard; and our invaluable blocking backs in performers like Melvyn Douglas and Robert Young.

To make the comparison complete, you... and you... and you are the cheering section, and true to form, you save all your huzzahs for the ball carriers and overlook the players who make the touchdowns possible.

Our "linemen" and "blocking backs" deserve more applause. Consider, for instance, Melvyn Douglas. I've given up trying to keep track of the pictures he has saved from mediocrity with his deft performances. He is the foil; the Garbo, Durbin, Colberts and Duneses always sparkle more brilliantly when he is in the cast. Bob Young usually takes secondary billing to some star — and will undoubtedly continue to do so for years to come for the simple reason that Metro considers him too valuable as a "blocker" to use him otherwise. As for the character actors, analyze the next screen hit that plays your theater and ask yourself how good it would have been without their contributions.

The spotlighted stars will always get the headlines. It's natural that they should, but—just once in a while—let's give their helpers a well-deserved hand.

MUTTERINGS: Producers who scoff at Hedy Lamarr's remark that she could be happy without a career should see her with that new baby. Frantic urge: To put Fred Astaire, George Murphy and Ray Bolger on a hot plate and settle arguments about their comparative tapping ability once and for all. Wonder if anyone has thought to tag that George Raft-Norma Shearer romance "The Prizefighter and the Lady?" Growl: Why won't the sponsor of that radio show give Frances Langford more time; a million dollars worth of talent is being half-wasted. Confidential to Mae: "Quit worrying—this swell on the West front." Any cameraman will tell you Claudette Colbert's one lady who doesn't believe in turning the other cheek.

MEMORIES: When Jean Harlow was so captivated by the smiles of a full grown bear in the San Diego zoo that she tried to buy it for a pet. . . . When Lee Tracy, yachting with friends, scornfully offered to eat any fish they could catch via out-of-season trolling—and gallantly made good on a haul of shark. . . . When Rudolph Valentino got so excited at his first American football game that he began yelling advice to the players—in Italian. . . .

the WORLD OF STAMPS

Almost daily new reports tell how philatelic plans are being upset by the European wars. The Philatelic Journal of Great Britain reports that the celebrations planned for the centenary of the introduction of postage stamps in 1840 have been cancelled. It states:

"Great as the disappointment of all philatelists must be that this important centenary cannot be adequately celebrated, they will sympathize with those indefatigable workers of the Royal Philatelic Society who have labored for the past two years to make the exhibit an outstanding success and now find their efforts are to be unproductive."

In America several stamp groups felt the United States should commemorate the centenary of that first postage stamp, issued by England. But now it is widely held that the U. S. should wait until 1947, which is the centenary of its own first postage stamp.

Canada's postal officials announced that due to the war and the disruption of ship sailings, a large consignment of Canadian postage stamps due from England have been delayed. They were 2 and 4-cent denominations badly needed for the Christmas season.

In the emergency, Canada has overprinted the Royal Visit stamps with 2 and 4-cent surcharges. The public is being warned that necessary measures are being taken to conserve the supply available.

Russia's New Sets

Advanced illustrations for the two Russian sets announced last week are shown below. The stamp on the

The stamp on the right is one of three stamps of identical design honoring the scientist N. G. Chernyshevski. Only the values change. They are 15k, 30k, 60k.

Both Drivers are Found Negligent In Fatal Accident

Coroner's Jury Deliberates 1 1/2 Hours Before Reaching Decision

Post-Crescent Oshkosh Bureau Oshkosh — Paul Kosup, 23, Oshkosh, came to his death Oct. 9 as the result of a skull fracture suffered in an automobile accident on Highway 10 in the town of Menasha due to negligence on the part of both drivers, a coroner's jury found here late Wednesday afternoon.

The accident occurred when cars driven by Lester Thielens, 24, route 2, Hilbert and Willard Dresang, 23, route 2, Appleton, collided head-on at 1:30 a. m., Oct. 9. Seven persons living in the Appleton area were injured in the crash. Florence Schmidt, Appleton, and Lorraine Eichsteadt, Greenville, are still confined to St. Elizabeth's hospital and were unable to testify.

None of the five persons who testified at the inquest were able to remember how the accident took place. Captain Irving Stulp of the Winnebago county highway police said the cars crashed head-on on the highway center line and that the front ends of both machines telescoped together.

Driver Testifies Willard Dresang, driver of the machine proceeding south, said Miss Schmidt was sitting in the seat with him; Kosup and Willard's sister, Loretta Dresang, 19, 1910 N. Division street, Appleton, were in the back seat when the accident occurred. He said the four had met at Appleton that evening.

According to Dresang the party had three glasses of beer apiece at an Appleton tavern and then spent an hour bowling. At 10:30 in the evening they left the bowling alley and went to a lunch room where they all had several hamburgers. He said he could remember nothing about the accident. He said the pavement was wet and that a fine mist necessitated use of the windshield wiper.

Loretta Dresang, Willard's sister, substantiated her brother's testimony and told the court that none of the party did any drinking at the bowling alley. She said they "must have left the lunch room a little before 1 o'clock in the morning."

The last thing Miss Dresang could remember was stopping at an Appleton roadhouse on the way home, she said "We didn't go in because it was closing time," she testified.

Lester Thielens, driver of the north-bound car, told the jury that Miss Eichsteadt was sitting in the front seat with him and Clarence Leitner, 22, Hilbert and Marion Backus, 20, 1120 W. Harris street, Appleton in the back. He said three of the party had met in Appleton at 2:30 that afternoon and then had driven to Greenville to pick up Miss Eichsteadt.

Returning From Dance Thielens said he had had three beers at a number of taverns that afternoon and two highballs and two more beers later in the evening. They visited a number of taverns and had supper at Elmer Leitner's residence in New Holstein. The entire party attended a dance at Brandt that evening and were returning home when the accident occurred. Thielens estimated his speed at 35 miles per hour and remembered nothing after crossing an intersection near Waverly beach about a quarter of a mile from the accident.

Marion Backus and Clarence Leitner, riding in the back seat of the Thielens car, substantiated Thielens's testimony. Miss Backus told the court she had seven whiskey highballs during the course of the afternoon and evening and that she had fallen asleep prior to the crash. Leitner testified that he had consumed "six or seven beers" and said he "paid no attention to the car at the time of the accident because I was riding in the back seat."

County patrolmen Irving Stulp and Robert Reech, who investigated the accident, identified pictures taken immediately afterwards. A coroner's jury consisting of Earl Horn, Joseph Walter, Joseph Michaels, Walter Spohnitz, William Scriver, and Milton Mueller, all of Oshkosh, took an hour and one-half to arrive at a verdict.

The parents and teachers are planning the Christmas program which will follow a social hour and party Thursday evening for the December meeting of the Washington school PTA in the school. The program will be from 8 to 9 o'clock.

Kimberly school's PTA will entertain with a Christmas program at 7:30 Tuesday evening in the school. A chorus, directed by Miss Ruth Roper, will sing and Miss Christine Jersild, who attends Frances Schimmer college at Mount Carroll, Ill., will present a Christmas reading.

Then get from your drugstore 2 1/2 ounces of Pinex, pour it into a pint bottle and add your syrup. This gives you a full pint of the wonderful medicine for coughs due to colds. It makes a real saving for you, because it gives

Madison Publisher Sees President, Farley and Crowley

Washington—Pleasant but inconclusive conversations were held here Wednesday between high-ranking Democrats and William Evjue, publisher of the Wisconsin Progressive newspaper, the Capital Times.

Evjue talked Wisconsin politics with President Roosevelt, National Democratic Chairman James A. Farley, and Wisconsin's own Leo Crowley, chairman of the Federal Deposit Insurance corporation, who, although a Democrat, is a firm friend of Sen. Robert M. LaFollette, Jr.

The Madison Progressive editor's conferences were viewed with interest here, as Evjue supported the president, against Sen. LaFollette and the rest of the Wisconsin congressional delegation, both Progressive and Republican, on the neutrality issue.

Evjue is understood to have told leaders here that a liberal delegation to the 1940 national Democratic convention, uninstructed as far as the name of the candidate is concerned, could get Progressive support in the Wisconsin preferential presidential election for delegates to the national conventions to be held next April 2.

After breakfasting with Crowley, Evjue and Crowley met Farley in the lobby of the Mayflower hotel, where both Farley and Crowley live. Farley invited Evjue to see him in his office at the postoffice department.

W.C.O.F. Completes Plans For Annual Christmas

Reciprocal Trade Agreements Issue Divides C. O. P.

Differences May Be Strong Enough to Kick Up Rumpus at Convention

BY W. B. RAGSDALE

Washington — (P)—Almost buried in the background of a big push for Republican harmony lies a pulsing difference of opinion over reciprocal trade agreements—one which may be strong enough to kick up quite a rumpus at the party's next convention.

The Republicans are no more united in their denunciation of the trade agreement policy than the Democrats are in its support. The tariff had ceased to be a positive issue long before the Democrats came into power.

In the old days of tariff bills, there was a continual clamor from farm states for better treatment. Historically, the alignment of farm states against high tariffs and industrial states for them goes all the way back to the first tariff bill, passed in 1789. The complaint throughout was that the tariffs lifted the prices which farmers had to pay for manufactured products but did little or nothing toward supplying them with more money with which to buy.

Forms Basis
The Hawley-Smoot act, which forms the basis for the trades that are being worked out with foreign nations, started out to be a tariff bill which would try simply to meet this complaint. In the middle of the 1928 campaign, Senator Borah (R-Idaho) got from Herbert Hoover a promise to call a special session of congress after election for the sole purpose of helping the farmer through alteration of the tariffs and other appropriate legislation.

A special session was called in the summer of 1929 to fulfill that promise. Plans were set to restrict the legislation to that specific object.

Then the eastern industrialists turned on the heat. Washington swarmed with enough lobbyists to crowd the hearing room of a later investigating committee. The Hawley-Smoot act was the result. It carried a general increase in rates, tried to plug all gaps in the tariff wall.

In the present case, the arguments have been somewhat altered but the underlying complaints that the farmer is getting less than a square break are the same. The objections to the trade agreements come chiefly from cattle and beef sugar states. Senator Borah again is one of the leaders of the opposition.

The farm organizations themselves are divided on the question. Of the big three, one is opposed to trade agreements, a second is lukewarm, the third is for retention of the policy with perhaps slight changes.

SEC Operations Will be Studied, Lawrence States

Cites "Strange Case" of Consumers Power Company

BY DAVID LAWRENCE
Washington—In the crusade to find out the extent to which bureaucratic commissions and boards have arrogated to themselves power far beyond the original intent of congress in writing regulatory laws, the operations of the Securities and Exchange commission will doubtless be closely scrutinized.

O' originally, the SEC was established to see to it that investors were not defrauded, through misrepresentation or otherwise, but there was no provision in the law which gave the SEC the power to decide who shall make a commission and who shall not in the matter of selling securities. Governmental control of the security business was designed to regulate practices as they relate to investors and not to equalize handicaps between competitors or to take business away from one set of investment dealers and give it to another.

If indeed, as it begins to look, the SEC can exercise the power to distribute the profits in the investment business, then one of these days, the political machines of the country, Republican or Democratic, will find the SEC one of the best sources of graft and patronage in the whole government, because millions of dollars are involved in these transactions.

The SEC's position as a non-political institution has thus far been well maintained and there is an excellent impression nationally as to its integrity. But the strange case of what has just been happening to the issue of the Consumers Power company introduces an element of conjecture as to whether the SEC has not permitted itself to be used by competitors in the investment business to establish a precedent for governmental intervention in the private business of distribution and selling.

SEC Approval
The security prospectus required by law in the case of the Consumers Power company was fully approved by the SEC. Every technicality in this respect was met and the SEC itself only a year ago gave permission for the same holding company to buy common stock out of its own operating companies, so that there could hardly be any question as to whether the Consumers Power company issue of securities was in conformity with the public utility holding company act. If there were, the SEC when the prospectus was formally before the commission on the preceding issues of securities, of which there were five.

Nothing was heard publicly until some investment dealers, about 10 days ago, began to complain that New York houses had a larger share of the issue than competitors thought they deserved. These dealers testified that their only interest in the whole matter was to get a bigger cut in the distribution money. The commission set a precedent by being willing to listen to such charges even though it admitted in a public statement that it possessed no authority over such things.

In a letter to Senator Brown of Michigan, discussing the question raised by the consumers power company case, the Securities and Exchange commission said:
"Even though we do not have direct power to control the distribution of underwriting participation, it may be that a way can be found to secure a greater regional distribution of corporate financing."

Banking Machinery
The whole country has been waiting for the public utility business to get financed so that employment could be expanded and raw materials bought. For 1940, about $200,000,000 additional funds will have to be borrowed by the utility companies for their needs. If the SEC is going to require that these issues be handled so that everybody who runs down to Washington for a piece of commission financing can have it, the whole investment banking machinery will become political.

The amazing thing is that, while most investment bankers have been deriding governmental interference in private business, yet among them are some who do not hesitate to drag a governmental agency into the picture so as to enable them to get a profit.

Lately there has been quite a movement among some investment bankers to compel competitive bidding in security issues. This principle, if introduced as a matter of law, which it isn't as yet, merely means that the borrower is at the mercy of the lowest bidder, regardless of the financial capacity of the lender to make good his commitment or to take care of the distribution of the securities in a proper way. If competitive bidding can be forced by a governmental agency in the security business, it means governmental control, directly or indirectly, of all large purchasing of commodities as well as lending of money and introduces more red tape and bureaucracy without any corresponding benefits to the economic system.

The precedent in the Consumers Power company case is proving to be one of the interesting examples of how bureaucracy grows beyond the intent of congress, thus adding

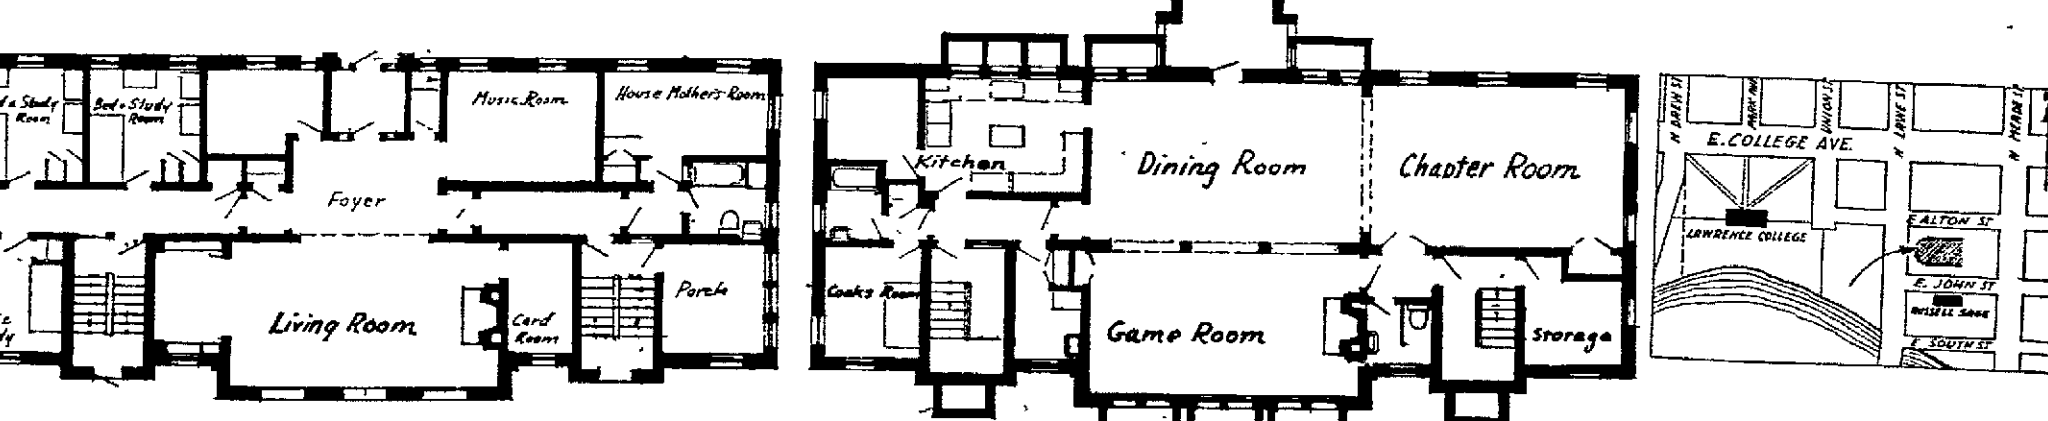

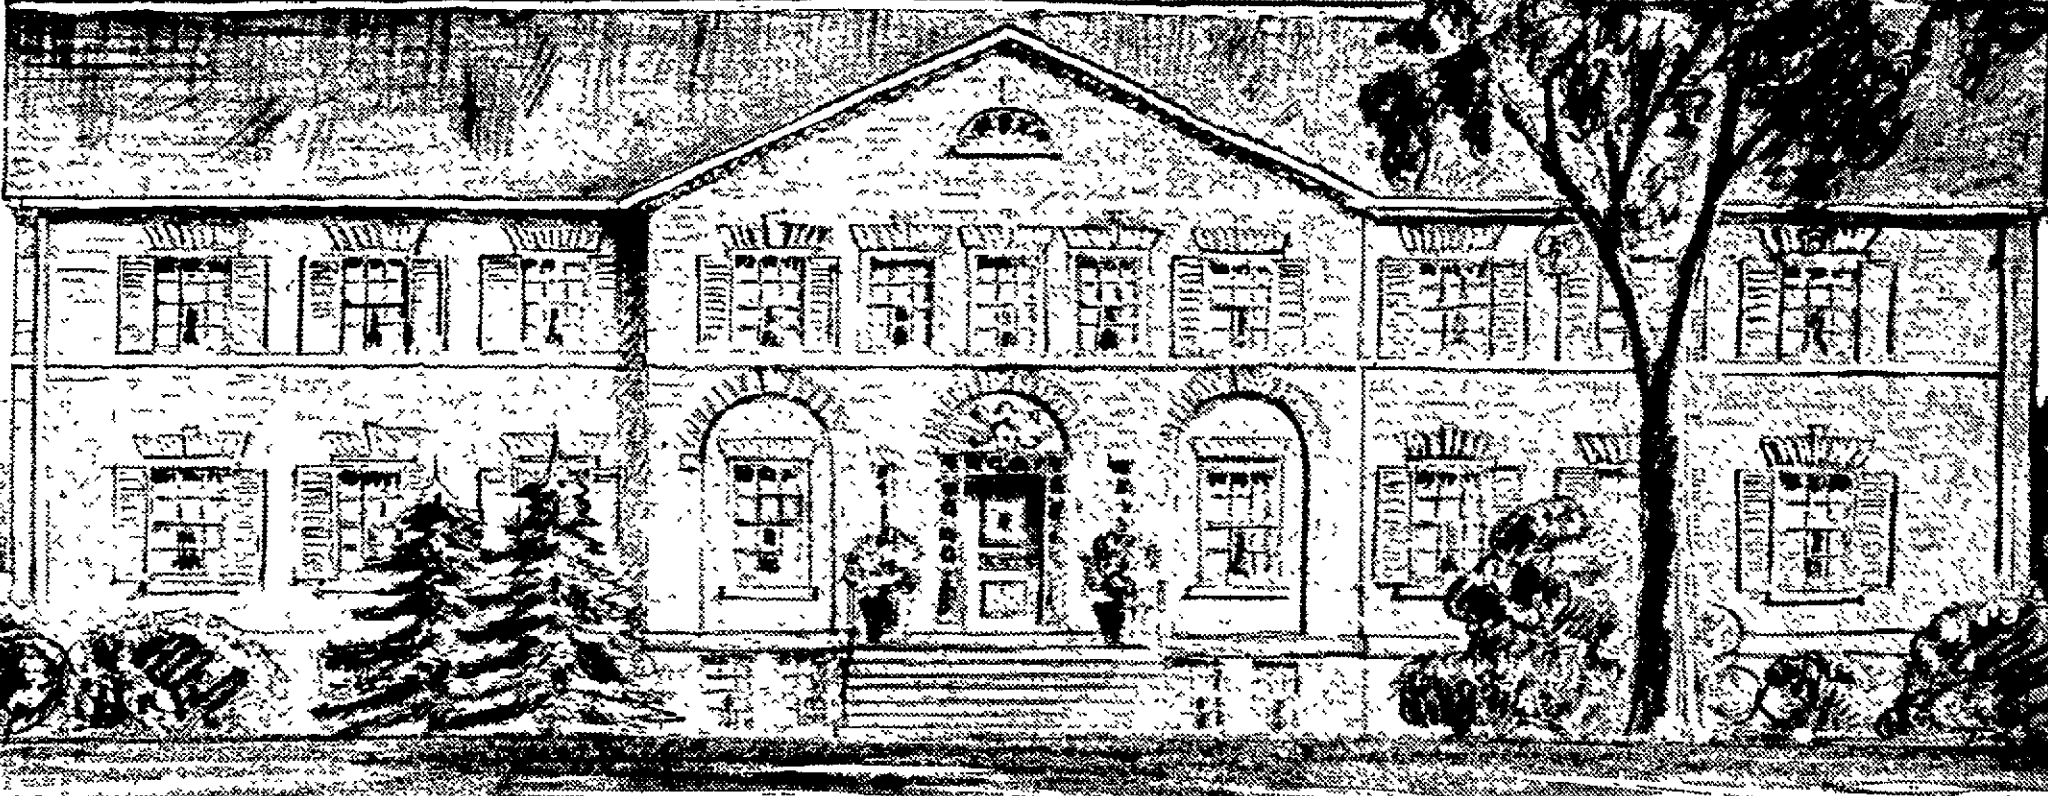

Sketch of One of 6 New Fraternity Houses Lawrence College Will Build

Shown below is an architect's drawing of one of the six new fraternity houses which will be built by Lawrence college in quadrangle style across from Russell Sage hall. The view is taken from the side of the house which will face the inner court.

The exact location of the new fraternity buildings is shown in a map at the lower right, beneath the drawing. The houses, each of which will accommodate 22 men, will be built of Wisconsin stone, Georgian style. The street side of the buildings will be attractive, with double entrances. Shown at the lower left is the first floor plan for each of the six fraternities and at the center the plan for the basement.

As is indicated in the plan, the first floor will have a large living room. There will be accommodations for five students at one side of the house on the first floor, with the house mother's suite occupying the other side.

The basement will house the dining room, chapter room, and game room, and will have accommodations for the cook. The kitchen will also be located at this level, which is actually only four feet below ground level. The second floor, the plan of which is not shown here, will have eight double study and dressing rooms and one single bedroom and study. Sleeping porches will be built at each end of the house, affording three exposures. A total of 17 men will be accommodated on the second floor.

Periodic Examinations Best Insurance Against Cancer

"Too many people still believe in the adage 'Never trouble trouble till trouble troubles you,' and they overlook entirely the fact that medical diagnosis has progressed by leaps and bounds during the past few decades, so that it is now possible to diagnose serious progressive, and eventually fatal, diseases at such time that removal or prevention is often possible.

"All things have a beginning, and human cancer is no exception. In most instances this beginning is localized in some one spot. The early lesion frequently is neither painful nor visible to casual observation. Therefore, careful and thorough examination is usually necessary to find it. Like many other diseases, cancer in its early stages is preventable, and annual health examinations can reduce the number of yearly deaths from this disease.

Needless Deaths
"Many lives are unnecessarily sacrificed on the altar of delay or because cancer is not discovered until it has reached the incurable stage. The problem of cure, therefore, is not primarily the method of treatment but the stage of the disease at which treatment is begun, which in turn depends on the physicians' opportunity to detect

ald. The high school freshmen and sophomore debate teams will have practice debates here Thursday evening. The subject for debate this year is: "Resolved-That the federal government should own and operate the railroads." The affirmative

College to House 6 Fraternities in New Quadrangle

President Barrows Announces Plans for $275,000 Project

social expenses such as exist in the present fraternities will amount approximately to $45 a month. Members not living in the houses will be charged $6.50 monthly. These charges also will pay for regular maid service, and all light, heat and other miscellaneous charges which the college is to furnish in the future.

Preliminary work is in progress at the present time and excavation will be started as soon as weather conditions make it possible in the spring. It is anticipated that fraternities will occupy these buildings by Christmas of next year.

This is the third step in the improvement program which President Thomas N. Barrows and other Lawrence college officials are hoping to have completed within 10 years.

The first step was the construction of the six concrete tennis courts, which were ready for use last year, and the second was the girl's athletic field, which was begun last spring and which will be ready for use next fall. It is situated along the river in back of Science and Ormsby halls.

The proposed building changes announced by President Barrows call for the construction of a new dormitory, the remodeling of the present ones, changing Main hall into an administration building, the enlargement of the library stacks, the construction of a new student union building, and a fine arts center.

Main hall, the oldest campus building and the meeting place for classes for nearly one hundred years, will be remodelled to house the administration offices and to center the museum collection. The library will be enlarged by building additional stack space toward Lawrence street, and the vacant administration offices will provide much-needed reading and conference rooms. Around the present library building a new building will be constructed. In this building classes will be held and professors will have their offices, an arrangement which will reduce the number of classrooms now required. Present dormitory accommodations will be shifted, with men living at Sage hall and women closer to the gym and all women residing at Brookway, Ormsby, and a new dormitory on the west side of the campus. Plans also call for a landscaped women's campus, separated from the city by a wall, which will close off the end of Lawrence street.

The old gymnasium and perhaps the observatory will be torn down to make room for a new student union building, with a women's gym floor to be used for dances and receptions, Pan-Hellenic suites, coffee shop, offices for student organizations and publications, lounges and conference rooms.

It is also proposed that a new fine arts building be constructed on the block just south of the library. This building would consist of three units, having the conservatory, the fine arts department, the college theatre, which would have the use of an acoustically perfect auditorium with a seating capacity of 500 and the most modern equipment for play production and musical recitals.

The new class room building which will be built around the present library is to be a three story structure and the lowest floor, which will be about grade level, given over to class-rooms and faculty offices.

The final result of the revamped campus will be one of unification. The college will be located on an unbroken piece of property between Durkee and Lawe streets, lying south of College avenue except for the chapel and the department, which the closing off of the streets which now run between the various buildings. By changing the men and women's dormitories the advantages will be gained of putting the men together on one end of the campus and the women at the other, each located nearer their distinctive activities.

LOUISIANA VOTERS TELL THEIR STORY

Ten years ago Huey P. Long, the Louisiana "Kingfish," burst across the national sky. Huey made himself the boss of Louisiana. When he died, in 1935, his machine carried on. To find out what the voters of Louisiana think about the Long machine, which still rules the state, the American Institute of Public Opinion has conducted a scientific fact-finding investigation among a cross-section of Louisiana voters.

From the up-country parishes along the Arkansas line to the Mississippi delta country, carefully selected field investigators have gotten the Louisiana story... what the state thinks of the present Long machine... whether they regard the elections of recent years as being "on the level" or not... and what they think of the late "Kingfish" himself.

PILOT IN DISTRESS

Here is a little problem to solve: "If you were an airplane pilot and had lost one of your landing wheels while in the air, what would you do?"

That sort of thing has taken place from time to time. Some pilots have decided to land as well as possible with the crippled gear. More than once their skill has brought a safe, though bumpy, landing. In other cases the plane has turned over, with injury or death to those aboard.

Another way is to call for help. It is hard to make anyone on the ground hear a shout from an airplane, but a pilot might circle around an airfield for a time, until someone noticed the trouble with the landing gear. Transport pilots have radio phones with which they can call for help.

To the rescue may come another plane. As it sails overhead, it is watched closely. The pilot, or his assistant, lets down a rope with a wheel at the end.

The next step is for someone aboard the crippled plane to walk out (or crawl out) on a wing and wait until the wheel is let down to a point where he can seize it.

The rest is just a repair job in the air. The wheel is put in its proper place.

That is not a story of fancy. It actually has happened, with the plane making a safe landing afterward.

It has become common for one airplane to feed gasoline to another in the air. Men have piloted airplanes for weeks at a stretch. Going round and round over the ocean or over the land, they have tested their plane's power to keep running.

Long flights of that kind are possible only because a fresh supply of fuel can be obtained from time to time. Usually the gasoline is obtained from another plane in flight.

To this date, gasoline has proved the best fuel for airplanes. As to the future, we cannot say what will be the best fuel. Perhaps scientists will discover some fuel or power many times as good as gasoline.

If such a discovery is made, it is quite likely that non-stop flights will take place around the world. They will be interesting stunts, but a few of them will be enough. After all, the best part of a trip around the world is the chance to stop, and see something along the way!
